U.S. TO EUROPE

Division Airlift Is Scheduled In Realistic Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department expects to stage a swift airlift of a whole Army division to Europe later this year in a full-scale, realistic test of its new combined Army-Air Force Strike Command.

The mass movement of about 15,000 soldiers across the Atlantic would be the biggest such overseas deployment for training purposes. Previous similar exercises have involved units of only battle group size.

It also could be one of the most expensive training exercises.

Estimates of cost are still being worked up. However, the cost would run into millions of dollars.

MONEY PROBLEM

The money question may sidetrack the plan. The House trimmed $114 million from funds for operations and maintenance for all the services for the coming fiscal year. That item embraces field exercises by the armed forces. The Defense Department has asked the Senate to restore $98 million.

Key to the capability of the Strike Command is fast air transportation. The Air Force now has more than 30 C135 jet-powered transports, in addition to other older or shorter range airlift planes. There has been no actual use of the planes in a big, division-size airlift.

To make the proposed test realistic, the Defense Department would like to put it into effect with as little advance notice as possible—except to allay alarm by Russia.

The seven Army divisions and the dozen wings of the Tactical Air Force are kept in readiness for a quick move. A 15,000-man division might be ferried to Europe within three or four days.

The whole division could not be moved in one airlift operation, because not enough planes are available without turning to other sources for aircraft.

Obviously at some point in the future—when still more and faster jet transports become available—the capability to get a whole division to a threatened area within three or four days could make it possible to bring home part of the presently assigned forces.

SHELBY JACKSON

State School Chief Enters In Top Field

Jackson, who has been superintendent for the past 15 years, told an estimated 5,000 backers he would represent good government, growth and prosperity.

He made the formal pitch for the Dec. 7 Democratic primary at his former high school here as his supporters enjoyed the picnic atmosphere and 3,000 pounds of barbecued beef brought out for the occasion.

'LEADERSHIP'

Jackson said "He could offer the ability, the leadership qualities years of successful experience, and the maturity to make a good governor."

The 59-year-old native of Eva, in Concordia Parish, said, "We must have strong, outstanding, capable leadership in government willing to put forth best efforts for the good of all, facing the problems of this age, unafraid in taking a stand for that which is good and fighting that which is wrong."

"Sound fiscal policy backed up with the practices of honesty, integrity, fairness and economy at all levels of public administration was promised by Jackson.

He said he would administer in "such a way that we will deserve good government, and promised an aggressive fight against —what he called — federal encroachment upon the rights of the states."

Jackson said "he would solicit the support of other governors in our fight to restore constitutional government in this country."

An energetic backer of a "free electors" plan, Jackson said, he would push a "program of alerting our citizens to the dangers

Hearing Cut Short On Rail Dispute

Committee Urges Roads, Unions To Begin Bargaining

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Commerce Committee cut short a hearing Saturday on President Kennedy's rail labor legislation with a plea that both sides get down to serious collective bagaining.

In recessing the hearing until Monday, Acting Chairman John O. Pastore, D-R.I., said he thinks "a better purpose would be served" by giving the carriers and the brotherhoods time to negotiate.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz and other government representatives held a series of afternoon meetings with union and railroad officials that ended late in the day with no announcement of what progress, if any, had been made.

NEW MEETINGS

Wirtz had resumed this latest series of meetings Friday night.

The secretary set up another series of meetings Sunday, asking representatives of the trainmen, conductors and switchmen's unions to come in at 11 a.m., the firemen and engineers at 1 p.m., and the railroads to remain on call.

The only witness the committee heard was H. E. Gilbert, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (AFL-CIO), who strongly opposed Kennedy's proposal as a form of compulsory arbitration.

Under the measure, the 4-year dispute over job-cutting work rules proposed by the railroads would be turned over to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Rules changes it approved would be effective for two years unless supplanted by negotiated agreements.

Gilbert recommended instead that collective bargaining be resumed "under congressional direction and observation." He suggested that a special Senate-House committee be set up to serve as "a watchdog" and report on "who is dragging his heels."

"We think we have nothing to fear from congressional scrutiny," he said in testifying that it has been management, not the unions, that has refused to bargain.

Pastore and other Commerce Committee members made clear, however, that they hope Congress will not have to pass any legislation.

Harriman Says Ban Important As 'First Step'

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) — W. Averell Harriman said Saturday the test-ban treaty initialed in Moscow is "a very important first step" in improved East-West relations and that it in no way inhibits the use of nuclear weapons in war.

Harriman brought a personal message from Khrushchev to Kennedy. He declined to characterize its tone or to divulge its contents.

One official described it as "very friendly."

AT CONFERENCE

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, William C. Foster, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, and Foster's deputy, Adrian S. Fisher, were among the conferees.

Rusk is expected to go to Moscow late next week for the formal signing of the test-ban agreement which Harriman initialed on behalf of the United States.

Harriman said questions of whether the agreement would interfere with use of nuclear weapons in actual war were "spoken of quite openly" in the Moscow talks but that the language of the treaty makes it clear that it "in no way inhibits the use of nuclear weapons in war."

It is a test ban treaty, and there is no basis for a conclusion of that

West Mostly For Nuclear Testing Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — First soundings by U.S. diplomats throughout the non-Communist world have indicated a groundswell in favor of joining the pact to outlaw atmospheric atomic weapons testing.

Officials said reports already in from several dozen capitals show interest in signing the treaty initialed in Moscow Thursday by U.S., British and Soviet negotiators.

They hope the number will soar to more than a hundred, covering most of the globe. France and Red China are expected to be notable holdouts.

MORE TALKS

The preliminary favorable responses have been tempered in many cases, however, by the need for further consultation and ratification according to domestic government processes—just as in the United States, the Senate must consent to a treaty before it becomes binding.

So far only three nations are reported to have announced publicly their intent to sign—Australia, Canada and Ireland.

India has advised President Kennedy that it will sign the treaty as soon as the accord comes into effect, it was learned from diplomatic sources. India's Prime Minister Nehru sent a personal letter to the President advising him of that and also expressing Nehru's pleasure that the accord had been reached, an official said.

Some of the smaller countries also are reported to have reservations about signing on the grounds that what they do will have little impact on the great powers. U.S. diplomats hope that attitude will change, believing that as more countries join, the treaty will be more effective.

'Go-It-Alone' Stand Is Held By De Gaulle

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle apparently is resolved to "go-it-alone" again on nuclear testing and a possible East-West non-aggression pact.

De Gaulle meets the press Monday afternoon in one of his rare news conference—the first in fact, since he rocked the Western alliance Jan. 14 by vetoing Great Britain's European Common Market entry.

He returned to Paris Friday night from his Eastern France country home at Colombey - Les-Deux-Eglises, where he spent four days working on the statements he will make.

He went over them again Saturday morning with Premier Georges Pompidou and Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville.

Although only one or two close aides probably know what De Gaulle will say, French officials were allowed to "leak" a few hints.

According to this purportedly "inside" information, De Gaulle will:

—Reject firmly all appeals both by his allies and the Russians to join the Moscow nuclear test ban agreement. He will emphasize he is determined to push ahead with France's own independent nuclear force and not to sign any nuclear test pact until his nuclear force is ready and unless there is simultaneous agreement to destroy all existing nuclear stockpiles and the vehicles for delivering them.

Record Rains Flood Tulsa; 8 Inches Fall

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A record rainstorm flooded Tulsa Saturday and a mysterious rainmaker who had promised to bring showers said he would try to turn off the downpour.

Nearly eight inches of rain fell, mostly in torrential showers during midmorning. The 7.5 inches recorded officially by the Weather Bureau topped a 7.3 inch rain in May of 1943 as the most rain in a 24-hour period.

No serious injuries were reported from the flooding.

Streets throughout the city were awash and police asked boat owners to volunteer for rescue work. Some families were evacuated in low areas. So were Indians camped in a park for Tulsa's annual pow-wow.

Dozens of underpasses were flooded and cars were stalled in deep water throughout the city. At least 18 fires, only two of them serious, were reported started by lightning. Numerous scattered power failures were reported.

At one point, the Fire Department reported "every truck in town" was out on a call. Off-duty police were called in and some civil defense workers turned out to aid evacuations.

The Oklahoma's men's amateur golf tournament finals were washed out.

The "rainmaker," who had vowed Thursday afternoon to bring at least two inches of rain to Tulsa within 72 hours, said he had never tried to stop rain once it started, but added, "I believe it (his process) would work in reverse."

He agreed to try to stop—or at least slow down—the rainfall.

The rain had started to abate in some areas before he agreed to try to stop it, but clouds were still heavy and rain was still falling in many areas.

CANDIDATES TO FILE

Deadlines Ready For State Races

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Candidates for Louisiana's top elective offices had 40 days Saturday to decide whether to qualify with the state central committees of political parties.

The committees will meet Sept. 7 to call for the primary election for governor and other state offices.

Qualifying papers must be filed by 5 p.m. Sept. 14.

Twenty-four hours later is the deadline for the state central committee chairman to certify names of candidates with the secretary of state.

This applies to both major political parties in Louisiana. The Democratic State Central Committee by law must meet in the State House of Representatives. The Republican State Central Committee usually meets at Alexandria.

TIMETABLE

Sept. 17 — Last day for meetings of district and parish committees to issue calls for district, parish and ward officer elections and for members of the legislature. Meetings must be held within 10 days after call is issued by the state central committee.

Sept. 19 — Last day for objection to candidacies for state office.

Sept. 24 — Last day for qualifying by local candidates — usually seventh day after calls are issued by various local committees.

Off Limits Rule Draws Protests Of Southerners

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new Pentagon policy of declaring communities off limits in case of serious racial discrimination drew angry protests Saturday from some southerners.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., accused the administration of "economic blackmail in its rawest form." Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett said that "if we don't just bow to them, then we're off limits."

Some other Southern officials did not seem disturbed. They predicted little use of the order because of recent progress in desegregating communities near military establishments.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, authorized military base commanders Friday to place entire communities off limits to protect nearly a quarter of a million Negro servicemen and their dependents from off-base discrimination.

The criterion would be "relentless discrimination," or "those places or communities which would continue to practice discrimination regardless of the situation," the Pentagon said. Base commanders could not use the off-limits device without permission of their service chiefs.

Thurmond, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the order would be detrimental to the local economy, individual servicemen and their families, and "the entire defense program."

The American people will not accept government blackmail and coercion, Thurmond added.

Syria's New Strongman Is Now Apparent

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Maj. Gen. Amin Hafez emerged Saturday as the undisputed strongman of Syria. The silver-haired military leader was named army commander in chief and chairman of the ruling National Revolutionary Council.

He replaced Louai Attassi, who resigned from both posts. No explanation was given for Attassi's sudden relinquishment of power, and no new posts for him were announced.

Damascus Radio interrupted radio and television programs with the surprise announcement that made Hafez, 52, the most powerful man in Syria.

Attassi had headed the army and Revolutionary Council since a coup March 8 that brought him and the Ba'ath Socialist party to power—and ultimately into a dispute with President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic that wrecked Nasser's unity plans.

Hafez already held the posts of deputy premier, deputy military governor and minister of defense and interior. He has taken over as the key man in the power struggle that has been going on in Syria the past month.

Damascus Radio said Hafez will retain all former posts in his new offices.

Chemical Firm Hit By Blasts

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A fire fed by chemicals and fanned by minor explosions destroyed Saturday a large metal building of a chemical firm located in the midst of a sprawling industrial complex on suburban Neville Island.

About 150 firefighters battled almost seven hours before bringing it under control. It took them several more hours to completely extinguish the blaze.

H. J. Shearer, plant manager, estimated damage to the combinaiton warehouse-processing building at about $500,000.

Deputy Fire Marshall David Balsley of Allegheny County said the blaze was touched off by an overheated tank of resin, a coal tar derivative used for the manufacture of floor tile, paint and varnish.

PHOTO COMPETITION

1st Triple Winner Named In Contest

By FRANK NOONAN

He is Lee Estes, 4114 Blanks St., Monroe, who last week won a first and a second place award. In the latest round his prints took first in Class B, teenager and adult activities; Class C, scenes and tabletops, and Class D, animal life and pets, for awards totaling $15.

Estes' winners were, in Class B, a photograph captioned, "Inside Looking Out." It shows his teenage daughter, Connie, looking through window of door as if waiting for someone. Her face is framed by curtains.

In Class C, "Glass in Tandem," showing a glass vase of graceful design in front of an ornate glass jar. Estes said both containers were filled with colored water and a single floodlight was used in the background.

In Class D, "Old Smokie," portrait study of a donkey's head, taken last summer in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky. Estes said of the animal, "It isn't a thoroughbred."

Jimmy King, 2109 Valencia, Monroe, who won two first place awards in the third week of competition, this week cornered two second place and one third place awards for $8 in prize money.

Latin Rescues Berlin Fiancee

BERLIN (UPI)—A hot-rodding South American sped under Communist barriers in a low slung sports car to free his East Berlin girl friend in the second such escape of the year, West Berlin police disclosed Saturday.

The escape was made in a drenching rainstorm at 3 a.m. Friday with the 22-year-old girl curled up in the small trunk of the car as the man, 26, zigzagged past barriers and zipped under the 38-inch high Communist barrier poles at the Friedrichstrasse crossing point.

Name of the man was not disclosed. A spokesman said he was an Argentinian but other reports said he was a Brazilian.

SPLIT WITH ADVISER

Wife Of Wilson Cause Of Mystery

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The split between President Woodrow Wilson and his close adviser, Col. Edward M. House—long baffling to historians—was attributed by House chiefly to resentment by Wilson's second wife.

An explanation for the break came from Charles Seymour, former Yale University president, who said House confided in him shortly before he died in 1938.

Seymour retired as president of Yale in 1950. Since then he has worked on the House papers in the university's library.

His explanation of the Wilson-House split was announced Saturday by Yale and the publication "American Heritage." Seymour relates his conversation with House in the magazine's August issue.

Wilson and House met in 1911 and the latter promptly became Wilson's adviser.

Wilson's first wife died in August 1914. He married Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, an intelligent and strong-minded woman, in December 1915.

House is quoted as saying that the second Mrs. Wilson did not care for his influence on her husband. He said he had evidence that Mrs. Wilson criticized him constantly.

Seymour said House told him that in addition to Mrs. Wilson's resentment, "Bernard Baruch did not want me around." House was quoted as saying that Baruch, economic adviser at the conference, behaved as if he had replaced House as Wilson's confidante.

In New York, Baruch declined to comment.

Of his 1938 talk with House in the latter's New York apartment, Seymour writes:

"Seventy-nine years old, he (House) was failing rapidly, but his thoughts returned constantly to the break with Wilson. Although the memorandum which incorporated his remarks of that afternoon was drafted on the spot, House approved its publication — but not until 25 years after his death."

Automation Described In Bridge Field

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bridge experts get a taste of automation when the American Contract Bridge League's 35th annual Summer Nationals open Sunday.

An electronic data computer will deal and score the hands for the tourney's main event, the six-day-long life master pairs championships.

Vice President Richard M. Bloch of Minneapolis-Honeywell, the maker, says the computer could bid and play the hands, too.

"Well, it will have to show me. I'm from Missouri," was the wary response at a news conference of Charles H. Goren, a bridge authority.

More than 3,000 bridge experts will be watching for the computer scores in the blue-ribbon life master pairs event. Victory places the player among the bridge world's elite.

The computer, Bloch estimates, will cut scoring time at the end of each day's play to only 10 minutes. Expert staffs of scorers now take upwards of 1½ hours to tabulate scores manually.

Scoring will be at the University of California's computation center and will be transmitted via closed-circuit television to the playing tables in the Biltmore Hotel.

"Actually," says Bloch, "the computer will finish the scoring 45 seconds after the last results are called in. But it will take about 10 minutes to tabulate totals and trnasmit them back to the players."

"He'd give his right eye and left arm for it," says Goren. "The be-all of existence for a bridge player is hanging around for the score."

So how about the dealing? Why have a computer do it?

Speed, for one thing, says Bloch, and a near-infinite number of non-duplicating hands, for another.

By near-infinite, Bloch explains, he means an ordinary deck of 52 cards furnishes the computer, called the H800, with nearly 55 octillion—that's 27 zeros — different combinations. This would keep one bridge game supplied with a new hand every second of every day for the next 1,750 sextillion — 21 zeros—years — "longer than even the most avid bridge fan could hold out," says Bloch.

So how about having the H800 take over the bidding and playing, too?

"Not as far off as you might think," Bloch says. "We've already had it bid, respond and rebid. By next year I think we can have it outperforming 90 per cent of the tournament players."

"Well, you take your computer and I'll take my players, and we'll just have a little bet on that," countered Goren.

Doctor Called To Emergency, Sees Mom Dead

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Dr. Earl Baughman Jr., a young intern, was called into the Vanderbilt Hospital emergency room Friday to treat victims of an auto crash.

One, who was pronounced dead on arrival, was his mother. The other, in critical condition, was his sister.

Mrs. Louise Baughman, 50, and her daughter, Betty, 22, were involved in an auto accident while driving here from their Tupelo, Miss., home to visit the doctor.

Mrs. Baughman's body was covered with a sheet when her son entered the emergency room. He did not realize it was his mother until a few moments later when his sister was carried in on a stretcher.

Baughman directed treatment of his sister for several minutes, and appeared calm. But he soon lost his composure and had to be led away.

"They almost made it," he said.

STARTS IN NEW MEXICO

Here Is A Chronology Of World's Atom Tests

NEW YORK (AP)—When three men initialed a treaty in Moscow Thursday to eliminate nuclear testing in the atmosphere, on land and under water it marked the end of a long road that started at Almogordo, N.M.

It was there, on July 16, 1945, that the first nuclear blast seared the American desert and the door to the nuclear age swung open.

There were many landmarks along the way. Here, listed in chronological order, are some of the more significant ones.

July 16, 1945—First atomic explosion takes place in New Mexico.

Aug. 6, 1945—The Japanese city of Hiroshima is bombed. Three days later Nagasaki meets the same fate.

April 1948—The United States tests three nuclear devices at Eniwetok.

Nov. 1, 1952—The United States tests its first hydrogen weapon at Eniwetok.

Aug. 12, 1953—Russia tests its first hydrogen bomb.

Feb. 13, 1960—France explodes her first atomic device in the Sahara.

Nov. 1-Nov. 3, 1958—Soviet Union holds new tests, then joins United States and Britain in indefinite suspension of tests while test ban talks go on in Geneva.

Aug. 31, 1961—Soviet Union announces it will resume testing: six days later United States says it must follow suit.

Oct. 30, 1961—Soviet Union explodes over 50-megaton H-bomb.

Dec. 13, 1961—New test ban talks open in Geneva.

April 1962—United States opens long series of tests in Pacific.

Announced number of nuclear explosions to date: United States 259, Soviet Union 126, England 21, France 6, United States and England together 2.

Hope Heiress Wed Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) — Heiress Mamie Spears Reynolds, 20, once owner of the Hope diamond, was married Saturday to Luigi Chinetti Jr., also 20, son of an internationally known Italian automobile racing driver.

The simple ceremony was performed in Our Lady Chapel in St. Patrick's Cathedral with 125 smartly clad guests attending.

Test Ban Signing Follows Line Of Russ Propaganda

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEWS ANALYSIS

Soviet propaganda, intended for Communist audiences, contends that Nikita Khrushchev's policies have turned world communism toward the "true path" to world victory.

This propaganda coincides with the successful windup in Moscow of U.S.-British-Soviet negotiations for a treaty banning nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere, in outer space and under water.

The treaty, hailed in some Western circles as a cold war breakthrough, was initialled Thursday in Moscow by representatives of the three nations. It generated a wave of relief around the world at the prospect of ending contamination of the atmosphere.

Yet there are some little-discussed aspects of the apparant thaw in U.S.-Soviet relations which will be examined closely in the West. One of these aspects is a propaganda drive by Moscow, whose principal aim seems to be to promise a dent in the Atlantic Alliance.

There are manifold reasons behind current Soviet policy. These involve the quarrel with the Red Chinese about how world communism should push forward; the needs of the internal Soviet and Communist bloc economies, and long-term Kremlin goals regarding Germany and Berlin.

With regard to the world Communist dispute, any results the present Soviet leadership can show will tend to supports its contention that its "peaceful coexistence policy" promises to pay dividends, despite criticism from Red China.

Communist audiences are being told by Moscow that under present world conditions, peaceful coexistence is being "thrust upon the imperialists," that Soviet policy leaves the West no other choice.

The propaganda says the policy is a "form of class struggle against capitalism" which leads to "an economic, political and ideological struggle against imperialism." The idea is that this struggle "exacerbates the deep antagonistic contradictions of the imperialists." In short: The policy is aimed at pulling the West apart.

The way Moscow Radio describes it, Soviet policy is supposed to rally the world's people—yearning for security—behind a Khrushchev call for "general and complete disarmament," thus arousing pressures and contradictions within the Western camp. It is noteworthy that the preamble to the test ban treaty proclaims as one goal the "speediest achievement of an agreement on general and complete disarmament." This disarmament proposal was first made by Khrushchev at the United Nations in 1960.

Soviet press treatment of the nuclear test ban agreement may contain some hints of how the Kremlin leadership proposes to turn it to good use.

The Soviet press announced the agreement at first with little fanfare, as if awaiting the Kremlin's direction signals. These appeared to come from Premier Khrushchev's question-and-answer interview with Pravda and Izvestia.

First, Khrushchev seemed to try to place the United States and the West on the defensive. With renewed vigor he pressed his proposal for a nonaggression pact between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Communist Warsaw Pact nations. This, Khrushchev said, could be accomplished if "the same good will is shown as was shown in negotiation of the nuclear weapons test ban." He said the Soviet Union has such good will.

So, by Soviet reasoning, if there is no such agreement, it will be in the West.

Khrushchev then said that following the test ban agreement, there should be efforts toward reducing the number of foreign troops in both East and West Germany. This would lead to "liquidation of the cold war." A step toward that would be a peace treaty signed by the World War II allies and the two Germanys. This is a perennial Khrushchev demand, aimed at pushing the Western Allies out of West Berlin.

The West can accept neither the nonaggression pact, as presented, nor the peace treaty proposal without recognizing Red domination of East Germany and all Eastern Europe as irrevocable.

There have been signs of serious misgivings in West Germany about U.S. negotiations with Moscow. In the view of some, the nuclear test ban has reduced greatly the chances of President Kennedy's multination nuclear force coming into being.

France, too, harbors suspicions and resentments. President Charles de Gaulle insists upon keeping France's control over its own nuclear arsenal, such as it is.

The Soviets have a problem of their own with Red China, which boasts it will have its own nuclear weapons in the not too distant future.

SKOPJE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Burial details dug in still trembling earth Saturday for quick interment of more than 600 recovered dead while relief workers sought other victims of the killer quake that devastated Skopje Friday.

Eight Americans, the only persons from the United States known to have been in the area, emerged from the catastrophe safe and sound.

Red Cross authorities estimated 2,000 persons may have perished in this Macedonian metropolis and tourist center of 270,000 persons, long a bustling showplace for President Tito's independent brand of communism. One city official expressed fear the toll may reach 6,000.

With medical supplies and other aid streaming in from abroad, field hospitals treated more than 2,000 injured. Anti-tetanus shots were ordered for every survivor.

They were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nocelia, of Willow Grove, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John Bobinec and their daughter Julianne, of Warren, Mich.; Dr. Bernard Phillips, a Boston University sociology professor, and two of his graduate students, Mr. and Mrs. David Rheubottom, of Lansing, Mich.

Americans Describe Quake

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) —Mary Nocella and her husband saw smoke billowing up outside the window of their hotel in Skopje. The room and the bed they were in shook. A vacuum bottle toppled from a bedside table and smashed on the floor.

Samuel Nocella rushed to the door. They key wouldn't turn.

The Americans knew, with plaster falling down around them, that it was an earthquake. The time was shortly after 5 a.m. Friday.

In another hotel, Dr. Bernard Phillips, a Boston University sociologist in Skopje doing research, bolted from his third floor room.

"I rushed outside," he said. "Everything was obscured by dust and I could see practically nothing."

Outside the Turist Hotel, he saw David Rheubottom and his wife Shirley, his postgraduate students from Lansing, Mich.

"The Rheubottoms and I went across the street to help dig some people out," he said.

None of these Americans was hurt. Their hotel—unlike the Hotel Macedonia, lying in ruins — was only damaged.

Phillips and the Rheubottoms saw a building that had been four stories high lying in a heap.

"There were voices of people calling for help," Phillips said.

By this time, the Nocellas from Willow Grove, Pa., were outside their hotel, the Jadran.

Samuel Nocella had kept jiggling with the key and finally it turned.

"I rushed down the steps in pajamas, ran out of the building and bumped into two French tourists," Mrs. Nocella said. "They warned me to get away from the building, which was in danger of collapsing and out to the main square.

"Sam followed me down, having stopped long enough to put on pants and scoop up his camera equipment."

He is a freelance photographer and his wife a researcher and writer. They were touring Europe, combining a vacation with business.

"We rushed to the square, just a short distance from the hotel, and saw a huge pile of bricks and stones and crumped plaster," Mrs. Nocella said. "Dust was still rising from this mound.

"All around us there were women screaming, tearing their hair and raising their arms to the sky gestures of despair. Some ran toward the mound shouting and pointing. From the bits of information we could pick up from the gathering crowd, we learned that this mound had been an apartment building housing about 30 families."

In three hours the Nocellas saw only two persons taken from the rubble alive—a baby and a very old man.

Phillips and the Rheubottoms all were back in this Yugoslavian capital Saturday, thankful to be alive. The Nocellas were particularly thankful to the room clerk in the Hotel Macedonia, a four-story building where 260 Yugoslavs and foreign visitors perished.

Thursday night — the night before the earthquake, he told them they couldn't have a room because the hotel was full.

Automation Described In Bridge Field

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bridge experts get a taste of automation when the American Contract Bridge League's 35th annual Summer Nationals open Sunday.

An electronic data computer will deal and score the hands for the tourney's main event, the six-day-long life master pairs championships.

"Well, it will have to show me. I'm from Missouri," was the wary response at a news conference of Charles H. Goren, a bridge authority.

More than 3,000 bridge experts will be watching for the computer scores in the blue-ribbon life master pairs event. Victory places the player among the bridge world's elite.

The computer, Bloch estimates, will cut scoring time at the end of each day's play to only 10 minutes. Expert staffs of scorers now take upwards of 1½ hours to tabulate scores manually.

Scoring will be at the University of California's computation center and will be transmitted via closed-circuit television to the playing tables in the Biltmore Hotel.

"Actually," says Bloch, "the computer will finish the scoring 45 seconds after the last results are called in. But it will take about 10 minutes to tabulate totals and trnasmit them back to the players."

"He'd give his right eye and left arm for it," says Goren. "The be-all of existence for a bridge player is hanging around for the score."

So how about the dealing? Why have a computer do it?

Speed, for one thing, says Bloch, and a near-infinite number of non-duplicating hands, for another.

By near-infinite, Bloch explains, he means an ordinary deck of 52 cards furnishes the computer, called the H800, with nearly 55 octillion—that's 27 zeros — different combinations. This would keep one bridge game supplied with a new hand every second of every day for the next 1,750 sextillion — 21 zeros—years — "longer than even the most avid bridge fan could hold out," says Bloch.

So how about having the H800 take over the bidding and playing, too?

"Not as far off as you might think," Bloch says. "We've already had it bid, respond and rebid. By next year I think we can have it outperforming 90 per cent of the tournament players."

"Well, you take your computer and I'll take my players, and we'll just have a little bet on that," countered Goren.

Doctor Called To Emergency, Sees Mom Dead

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Dr. Earl Baughman Jr., a young intern, was called into the Vanderbilt Hospital emergency room Friday to treat victims of an auto crash.

One, who was pronounced dead on arrival, was his mother. The other, in critical condition, was his sister.

Mrs. Louise Baughman, 50, and her daughter, Betty, 22, were involved in an auto accident while driving here from their Tupelo, Miss., home to visit the doctor.

Mrs. Baughman's body was covered with a sheet when her son entered the emergency room. He did not realize it was his mother until a few moments later when his sister was carried in on a stretcher.

Baughman directed treatment of his sister for several minutes, and appeared calm. But he soon lost his composure and had to be led away.

"They almost made it," he said.

STARTS IN NEW MEXICO

Here Is A Chronology Of World's Atom Tests

NEW YORK (AP)—When three men initialed a treaty in Moscow Thursday to eliminate nuclear testing in the atmosphere, on land and under water it marked the end of a long road that started at Almogordo, N.M.

It was there, on July 16, 1945, that the first nuclear blast seared the American desert and the door to the nuclear age swung open.

There were many landmarks along the way. Here, listed in chronological order, are some of the more significant ones.

July 16, 1945—First atomic explosion takes place in New Mexico.

Aug. 6, 1945—The Japanese city of Hiroshima is bombed. Three days later Nagasaki meets the same fate.

April 1948—The United States tests three nuclear devices at Eniwetok.

Nov. 1, 1952—The United States tests its first hydrogen weapon at Eniwetok.

Aug. 12, 1953—Russia tests its first hydrogen bomb.

Feb. 13, 1960—France explodes her first atomic device in the Sahara.

Nov. 1-Nov. 3, 1958—Soviet Union holds new tests, then joins United States and Britain in indefinite suspension of tests while test ban talks go on in Geneva.

Aug. 31, 1961—Soviet Union announces it will resume testing: six days later United States says it must follow suit.

Oct. 30, 1961—Soviet Union explodes over 50-megaton H-bomb.

Dec. 13, 1961—New test ban talks open in Geneva.

April 1962—United States opens long series of tests in Pacific.

Announced number of nuclear explosions to date: United States 259, Soviet Union 126, England 21, France 6, United States and England together 2.

Hope Heiress Wed Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) — Heiress Mamie Spears Reynolds, 20, once owner of the Hope diamond, was married Saturday to Luigi Chinetti Jr., also 20, son of an internationally known Italian automobile racing driver.

The simple ceremony was performed in Our Lady Chapel in St. Patrick's Cathedral with 125 smartly clad guests attending.

Test Ban Signing Follows Line Of Russ Propaganda

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEWS ANALYSIS

Soviet propaganda, intended for Communist audiences, contends that Nikita Khrushchev's policies have turned world communism toward the "true path" to world victory.

This propaganda coincides with the successful windup in Moscow of U.S.-British-Soviet negotiations for a treaty banning nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere, in outer space and under water.

The treaty, hailed in some Western circles as a cold war breakthrough, was initialled Thursday in Moscow by representatives of the three nations. It generated a wave of relief around the world at the prospect of ending contamination of the atmosphere.

Yet there are some little-discussed aspects of the apparant thaw in U.S.-Soviet relations which will be examined closely in the West. One of these aspects is a propaganda drive by Moscow, whose principal aim seems to be to promise a dent in the Atlantic Alliance.

There are manifold reasons behind current Soviet policy. These involve the quarrel with the Red Chinese about how world communism should push forward; the needs of the internal Soviet and Communist bloc economies, and long-term Kremlin goals regarding Germany and Berlin.

With regard to the world Communist dispute, any results the present Soviet leadership can show will tend to supports its contention that its "peaceful coexistence policy" promises to pay dividends, despite criticism from Red China.

Communist audiences are being told by Moscow that under present world conditions, peaceful coexistence is being "thrust upon the imperialists," that Soviet policy leaves the West no other choice.

The propaganda says the policy is a "form of class struggle against capitalism" which leads to "an economic, political and ideological struggle against imperialism." The idea is that this struggle "exacerbates the deep antagonistic contradictions of the imperialists." In short: The policy is aimed at pulling the West apart.

The way Moscow Radio describes it, Soviet policy is supposed to rally the world's people—yearning for security—behind a Khrushchev call for "general and complete disarmament," thus arousing pressures and contradictions within the Western camp. It is noteworthy that the preamble to the test ban treaty proclaims as one goal the "speediest achievement of an agreement on general and complete disarmament." This disarmament proposal was first made by Khrushchev at the United Nations in 1960.

Soviet press treatment of the nuclear test ban agreement may contain some hints of how the Kremlin leadership proposes to turn it to good use.

The Soviet press announced the agreement at first with little fanfare, as if awaiting the Kremlin's direction signals. These appeared to come from Premier Khrushchev's question-and-answer interview with Pravda and Izvestia.

First, Khrushchev seemed to try to place the United States and the West on the defensive. With renewed vigor he pressed his proposal for a nonaggression pact between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Communist Warsaw Pact nations. This, Khrushchev said, could be accomplished if "the same good will is shown as was shown in negotiation of the nuclear weapons test ban." He said the Soviet Union has such good will.

So, by Soviet reasoning, if there is no such agreement, it will be in the West.

Khrushchev then said that following the test ban agreement, there should be efforts toward reducing the number of foreign troops in both East and West Germany. This would lead to "liquidation of the cold war." A step toward that would be a peace treaty signed by the World War II allies and the two Germanys. This is a perennial Khrushchev demand, aimed at pushing the Western Allies out of West Berlin.

The West can accept neither the nonaggression pact, as presented, nor the peace treaty proposal without recognizing Red domination of East Germany and all Eastern Europe as irrevocable.

There have been signs of serious misgivings in West Germany about U.S. negotiations with Moscow. In the view of some, the nuclear test ban has reduced greatly the chances of President Kennedy's multination nuclear force coming into being.

France, too, harbors suspicions and resentments. President Charles de Gaulle insists upon keeping France's control over its own nuclear arsenal, such as it is.

The Soviets have a problem of their own with Red China, which boasts it will have its own nuclear weapons in the not too distant future.

Burial Details Dig While Earth Trembles From Severe Quakes In Yugoslavian City

SKOPJE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Burial details dug in still trembling earth Saturday for quick interment of more than 600 recovered dead while relief workers sought other victims of the killer quake that devastated Skopje Friday.

Eight Americans, the only persons from the United States known to have been in the area, emerged from the catastrophe safe and sound.

Red Cross authorities estimated 2,000 persons may have perished in this Macedonian metropolis and tourist center of 270,000 persons, long a bustling showplace for President Tito's independent brand of communism. One city official expressed fear the toll may reach 6,000.

With medical supplies and other aid streaming in from abroad, field hospitals treated more than 2,000 injured. Anti-tetanus shots were ordered for every survivor.

They were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nocella, of Willow Grove, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John Bobinec and their daughter Julianne, of Warren, Mich.; Dr. Bernard Phillips, a Boston University sociology professor, and two of his graduate students, Mr. and Mrs. David Rheubottom, of Lansing, Mich.

"The quake was terrible, really terrible," said Phillips, 32. "You could see many buildings that were left standing, but they were really ruined."

He and the Rheubottoms came to Yugoslavia three months ago on a Boston University-Skopje University research project.

The Nocellas, in Europe on a vacation-business trip, had paused overnight in Skopje on their way to Greece. Nocella, 36, is a freelance photographer. Mrs. Nocella is a researcher and writer. They tried to register Thursday night at the Hotel Macedonia, but it was full and the night clerk referred them to a nearby hotel, the Jadran.

"He saved our lives," Mrs. Nocella said.

The Hotel Macedonia, a four-story stone structure, collapsed on its sleeping guests. Officials said 260 persons—Yugoslavs and foreigners—died there. Also demolished was the Hotel Skopje, another four-story stone building. The toll there remained undetermined. The Jadran was among structures that came through with less damage.

Tito paused in his four-hour tour of Skopje before the mountainous pile of rubble that had been the Macedonia. With sorrow stamped in the lines of his face, the 71-year-old president declared:

"This must be moved quickly. The work of clearing and digging out must go on without interruption."

Aftershocks persisted. About 100 new quakes followed the first destructive jolt at 5:17 a.m. Friday. Most of these were so small, however, as to be perceptible only on scientific recorders.

Fear of infection and epidemics led to orders for the burial of all bodies immediately after their recovery. Those not identified were photographed, if still recognizable, for possible identification later.

Government officials announced soon after noon that 600 bodies had been recovered. Dazed survivors worked with soldiers, police and firemen in the quest for other victims, living and dead.

"It's awful," said one worker, with the streaks of tears down his dust-grimed face. "There's no way of telling how many people are under this mess. There's just no way of telling."

Health officials worried over the menace of shattered water and savage lines. Trucks moved in tons of pipe for restoration work. Broken light and power lines also drew attention of work crews.

All children up to 15 and all mothers with children up to 7 were moved to hotels in less-damaged communities in the mountains ringing Skopje.

He is a freelance photographer and his wife a researcher and writer. They were touring Europe, combining a vacation with business.

"We rushed to the square, just a short distance from the hotel, and saw a huge pile of bricks and stones and crumped plaster," Mrs. Nocella said. "Dust was still rising from this mound.

"All around us there were women screaming, tearing their hair and raising their arms to the sky gestures of despair. Some ran toward the mound shouting and pointing. From the bits of information we could pick up from the gathering crowd, we learned that this mound had been an apartment building housing about 30 families."

In three hours the Nocellas saw only two persons taken from the rubble alive—a baby and a very old man.

Phillips and the Rheubottoms all were back in this Yugoslavian capital Saturday, thankful to be alive. The Nocellas were particularly thankful to the room clerk in the Hotel Macedonia, a four-story building where 260 Yugoslavs and foreign visitors perished.

Thursday night — the night before the earthquake, he told them they couldn't have a room because the hotel was full.

Two Arraigned For Larceny - Treenap, That Is

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two men were arraigned Saturday on grand larceny charges for tree-napping.

David L. Barsky, 21, a salesman, and Tracey S. McCullum, 23, unemployed, were arrested in the act of climbing over the wall of the Brooklyn botanic garden with an ancient, two-foot Japanese dwarf pine tree. Garden officials said the potted tree was worth $3,000.

The garden reported the theft of another dwarf "bonsai" tree last Labor Day. Police were later informed that it was on the market and police-woman Pauline Dante, posing as a bonsai fancier, approached the seller, Barsky, Miss Dante reported that Barsky asked $2,500 for the tree, even though it was damaged. She said she told him she wanted a perfect specimen and he promised to deliver one to her.

Police surrounded the garden's Japanese section Thursday night and apprehended Barsky and his companion in the early morning hours Friday. A search of their homes failed to locate the other tree, which Barsky is believed to have destroyed.

Soho's Reaction To Trial Is Given

EDITOR'S NOTE: One of the United Press International reporters covering the morals trial of Dr. Stephen Ward made the rounds of Soho — London's "square mile of sin" — to find out what effect the trial disclosures has had on the district.

By HARRY J. STATHOS
United Press International

LONDON (UPI) — The sordid vice trial of Dr. Stephen Ward has forced many London prostitutes — from the high - priced call-girl to the painted streetwalker — to join the ranks of the unemployed.

The glaring publicity surrounding the trial of Ward, charged with procuring and living off the immoral earnings of prostitutes, has given London's gay West End —including Soho—the jitters.

The Ward trial has the city's "shady ladies" worried because most of their best customers have either gone underground or have gone to the Continent until things cool off.

"The heat is on," one expensive prostitute complained. "The Ward trial has been very bad publicity for us and many of our clients are afraid they might be implicated in some way."

The girl, Dorothy M., a sleek 22-year-old brunette, said many of her "play-for-pay" friends had either gone to the Riviera or to the United States for a vacation until Ward's sizzling trial is concluded.

Janet G., who works in a London nightclub as a "hostess," said many of her best customers—members of high society—were staying away from the club because of the publicity the Ward trial has received.

"Everyone's afraid that his name might be brought up in the Ward case," she said. "So they're behaving themselves until the trial is over."

DID A GOOD JOB

Youth Delivers Brother For Mom

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Household chores may not be Torin Thompkin's cup of tea, but when it comes to the unusual, he's prepared. Torin, 10, delivered a baby brother to his mother Saturday.

Long Beach police officers said Mrs. Betty Nicoll, 30, was home with her six children, ages 18 months to 11 years, when she began having labor pains.

She sent her son, Kelly, 11, for help.

While Kelly was gone, police said, the baby started to arrive and Mrs. Nicoll asked Torin for help.

By the time police arrived, Torin had learned obstetrics by experience.

Mrs. Nicoll gave instructions as the rest of the children looked on.

Torin and Kelly are children of a previous marriage, the other five are by her estranged husband, James Nicoll.

Mrs. Nicoll, the baby and Torin were all reported doing fine.

AT FISHFRY HERE

Candidates Give Wildlifers Views

World Staff Writer
By SAM HANNA

Rain failed to dampen the spirits of over 500 persons here Saturday night as the Ouachita Wildlife Unit mixed a flavor of Cajun humor with Louisiana politics at its annual fishfry.

Two candidates for governor, joined by six House hopefuls, dished out the politics while T. Roger of Norco provided the Cajun wit.

And the wildlife club served the fish, complete with all the trimmings — hush puppies, potato salad and soft drinks — as the big crowd on Cheniere Lake moved to a public shelter to get out of the rain.

Clyde Johnson, a Greensburg merchant who doubles as an evangelist preacher, got the jump on John J. McKeithen of Columbia in the speech - making from gubernatorial candidates.

Johnson, the first to arrive, was the first to speak, explaining that he didn't intend to be critical of Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, but if elected, "I'll turn Davis' sunshine into moonlight and roses."

McKeithen, however, got in a lick for wildlife conservation, declaring that if elected, "I'll come to you — the wildlife clubs — for advice on our wildlife programs. If you want changes, made, we'll make them."

Making his first appearance in the Monroe area, Johnson, shouting as he jumped about, proclaimed, "I'm not against Davis' deadheads, because if elected I'll spread it around."

And he expressed confidence that he would be elected, adding, "Come December 7th there's going to be some sad singing and slow walking."

On conservation, Johnson declared war on the "land companies responsible for this cancer."

"They'll call me Dr. Johnson when I get through with them," he said.

McKeithen said later, "I'm looking to you to help me put into affect a great conservation program."

"If you don't want any changes, there won't be any," he added, apparently referring to efforts in the past to abolish the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission.

Before he arrived, Mayor W. L. Howard, speaking in his behalf, said McKeithen would hold the "national administration's feet to the fire."

"If Louisiana has a governor that goes with the Kennedy administration, Louisiana will go in the Kennedy column," Howard said.

"John McKeithen will never bow to Kennedy or his brother Robert," he added.

Roger, second vice president of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation, entertained the audience between political speeches with Cajun tales about the bayou people of South Louisiana.

Meantime, candidates for state representative from Ouachita Parish spoke in this order — Ralph Caldwell, an Olin Mathieson official, D. C. Bernhardt, a Monroe attorney, Loy Heard, a West Monroe contractor, Rep. Mike John Jr., George Woods, retired assistant Monroe police chief, and Rep. Lawrence Gibbs.

Lloyd Voorhees, president of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation, read a statement from Sen. Jamar Adcock, who was unable to attend because of illness.

While the speeches were underway, Jim Packer, club president, said over 500 persons were fed. The club sponsors the fishfry—free to the public—annually.

Here is a brief digest of what the House candidates said:

Caldwell — "Let's hope we'll get a governor in office who will be against this present administration. We have a conservation program that needs to be improved. I will support programs in the best interest of wildlife conservation."

Bernhardt — "The Ouachita Wildlife Unit has always been active. The Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area is one of the club's achievements. I will counsel with the wildlife club on legislation affecting conservation."

Heard — "Outside of oil, Louisiana's greatest income is from wildlife and fisheries. I pledge to work to improve our natural resources."

John — "I am a candidate running on my record. I have worked closely with the conservation people and will pledge to do so in the future."

Woods — "I am asking for your vote, because I will work with you for recreation. I realize the importance of our natural resources."

Gibbs — "I have always supported the programs advocated by our wildlife officials. I will continue to work with this local group and other wildlife officials in the future."

In his statement Adcock said, "I have worked with the Ouachita Wildlife Unit during my present term in office. I pledge my support to this fine organization in the future."

Harriman Says Ban Important As 'First Step'

type, Harriman told a news conference after he had conferred with President Kennedy.

Harriman, undersecretary of state for political affairs, had returned a few hours earlier from Moscow where he was the chief U.S. negotiator of the treaty to ban atmospheric, space and underwater nuclear tests.

Asked what he and the President had discussed, Harriman said, "I think you'll have to ask him that."

Of the treaty he said: "I think this is a very important step . . . since the Austrian peace treaty perhaps it is the most important step."

Harriman said he has been away for two weeks and does not know what sentiment is in the U.S. Senate on the issue of approving the treaty.

The undersecretary was asked what caused the Russians to reverse their position and accept a treaty they previously rejected.

"I think Mr. Khrushchev wanted to show the Chinese that his policy of coexistence could produce some results," Harriman said.

He referred to Secretary of State Dean Rusk questions on what Rusk would discuss with Soviet Premier Khrushchev when Rusk goes to Moscow to sign the treaty. Harriman also said he does not know whether he will return to Moscow with the secretary of state.

His talks with Khrushchev had been conducted in "a genial atmosphere," Harriman said.

The undersecretary said there were no detailed discussions about the attitude of Red China and France to the test-ban treaty. Neither nation is expected to sign it.

Harriman said he did not discuss in detail with the Soviet premier the subjects of Berlin or a nonaggression pact.

"No commitments of any kind were taken or implied in any matters that applied to our allies," he said.

Harriman said the matter of halting hostilities in Laos had been discussed. He called the exchange of talk useful but inconclusive."

Harriman said the test ban treaty was drafted to allow other nations to become signatories, and said he is sure that a great many will.

He said the Russian people showed "a very wide approval and real rejoicing" over the treaty.

"This is a good treaty," he said. "It carries out what we have wanted to do for a good many years.

"People everywhere are happy at an end to testing in the atmosphere, which people everywhere have come to fear," he said.

Harriman, 71, appeared tired after his long jet flight from Moscow. His suit was rumpled, but it was hot and humid in the small room in the Hyannis Armory where he talked with newsmen.

Harriman said Premier Khrushchev was in a genial mood when he held his final meeting with him Friday.

He said it was in the Kremlin "and it was interesting. There were a great many people about, and Mr. Khrushchev looked like an American politician—he shook hands with some, and patted children on the head."

1st Triple Winner Named In Contest

in Class D. Captioned "Where's the Peanut," it features a small squirrel standing on hind legs with nose and one paw placed against a closed hand as if searching for some tasty tidbit.

L. A. Henderson, 700 Hilton St., Monroe, landed one second place award and two third place ratings for $7 in prize money. His second place entry, in Class D, "My Ole Tom," shows a cat lying in the grass with eyes almost closed, probably on the verge of slumber.

His third place winners were: Class A, "Forever Blowing Bubbles," a small girl blowing soap bubbles. Class C, "Candle Tree," showing top foliage and blossoms of a candle tree.

Mrs. Chester Simpson of Farmerville, who gained a second place in Class D in the third week of competition, this week had a third prize photo in Class B, for a $2 award. The picture records a scene of considerable activity. A woman is trying to climb onto a saddled horse and is being helped by a man and a boy. A man standing nearby is calmly watching the struggle.

Judging of entries in the latest phase of the contest was more difficult than in the earlier weeks.

Class A, babies and children, continued to draw the largest number of entries, with Class C, scenes and tabletops, running a close second. Class D, animal life and pets, was just a short distance behind Class C in entry volume. Class B, teenage, and adult activities, had the fewest entries, running far behind the other classes.

With three weeks remaining in the contest, a considerable amount of prize money remains to be handed out to lucky contestants. The contest will run through the week of August 11. Every week first place awards in the four categories will be worth $5, with $3 going to second places and $2 going to third places.

Black and white photographs taken after July 1, 1962 by amateur photographers, are eligible for entry in the contest. Prints should be marked on back for the class in which they are entered, along with name and address of photographer.

After awards are made for entries in the final week of the competition, a grand prize of $5 will be made for the best photo in each of the four categories.

The negatives of the grand prize winners will then be entered in the National Newspaper Snapshots Awards to compete with entries from other participating newspapers for cash prizes totaling a minimum of $31,000.

In black and white categories in the national contest there will be four $1,000 first prizes, four $500 second prizes, and four $250 third prizes.

Now is the time to start sending in prints to be judged Thursday, in the next phase of the contest. A total of $40 in prizes is given out every week. Contest rules will be published frequently in the Morning World and News-Star.

Dog's Loyalty Proves Fatal

The spotted pup, of questionable origin, befriended Jimmy Crutchfield, 13, a Chattanooga News-Free Press carrier. Poochie followed Jimmy every day as he made his rounds.

Jimmy accidentally dropped his newspaper bag Thursday while on his way home and the pup stood guard over it.

Jimmy finally re-traced his path Friday and found the empty bag—and the dog. There was a happy reunion.

But minutes later, a car struck the dog as she tagged along behind the bike.

Poochie was mortally injured and had to be put to sleep.

DIVISIONAL CHAIRMEN

Petty, Beckett Named To Givers Drive Posts

FRED PETTY

FRED BECKETT

Fred Petty and Fred Beckett have been named divisional chairmen for the 1964 United Givers Fund campaign, it was announced Saturday by J. H. "Slim" Scogin, Monroe area chairman.

Petty will head the group solicitation I division which solicits the firm and employee gifts from firms employing 10 or more people in Monroe. Beckett will be in charge of group solicitation II division which solicits small businesses, school teachers, and farmers and ranchers.

Last year, Petty was chairman of the industrial section which contacts primarily the large firms. Petty's division is the largest single unit of the campaign, accounting for about haif of the amount raised by United Givers.

Petty, a member of Rotary, was president of United Givers Fund 1961 - 62, and has served in leadership capacities on all UGF drives. He is a member of the Salvation Army Board, the YMCA Board, a director of the Northeast College Booster Fund, and an elder of the Covenant Presbyterian Church.

Beckett is president of the Greater Monroe Downtown Association. He is a director of the YMCA and past board member of the Red Cross. He is past president of the High 12 Club. For the past several years, Beckett has been a campaign worker calling on downtown merchants for United Givers Fund.

Under Petty's supervision, workers in group I division will be contacting firms and organizations through five major sections of the campaign; industrial, business, commercial, governmental and construction trades. Overall, there are some 570 firms and governmental offices to be contacted through this division.

Beckett will be in charge of organizing seven section to solicit more than 1,500 firms, schools and salesmen whose offices are in their homes. This division is organized on a geographic basis and is the largest of the UGF campaign in terms of manpower required and number of prospects to be contacted. More than 250 volunteers will be recruited to fill campaign slots in this division.

The United Givers Fund, to kick-off in late September, is still in the recruiting stages, according to Jack Campbell, campaign chairman. Campbell urged all persons who wish to volunteer a small amount of time this fall to get in touch with UGF headquarters.

AT BATON ROUGE

Another Catholic Integration Seen

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Another crack may appear in racial barriers here Sunday when the Roman Catholic Diocese of Baton Rouge issues a policy statement on parochial school desegregation.

Bishop Robert M. Tracy sent a letter to churches to be read to worshippers, and called a 9 a.m. news conference.

There was no official advance information on what the letter would say, other than discuss the "desegregation situation." However school desegregation was expected.

The move comes one day before 12th grade Negro students become eligible to apply to the East Baton Rouge Parish School Board or transfer to all-white schools.

The school board, after an eight -year struggle, bowed to a federal court mandate to start desegregating and set up a 10-day period for Negro pupils to make transfer application.

There will be a number of placement restrictions for public school pupils, but U.S. Dist. Judge Gordon West of Baton Rouge called for a liberal transfer policy. He approved 9 "reverse staircase" plan which will desegregate one grade a year downward.

Catholic schools in Louisiana started a trend toward desegregation some time ago although the dioceses of Baton Rouge, Lafayette and Alexandria remained segregated.

The New Orleans Archdiocese desegregated three years ago when the Orleans Parish School Board bowed to a federal court order and started a staircase plan to desegregate public schools there one grade a year upward.

Three public school grades in Orleans Parish have been desegrated. At last count there were 107 Negroes in white public schools in Orleans.

In parochial schools, the 10½-parish Archiocese of New Orleans had 200 Negroes enrolled in practically all grades among its 30 elementary and high schools.

Cool And Calm, Watching Cricket

SINGAPORE (AP) — One of two engines failed and the nose wheel dropped off, so the plane with three British airmen from the aircraft carrier Ark Royal was routed Saturday to a Singapore airbase.

As the turboprop plane circled the base, rescue crews laid a blanket of foam. After two hours of circling, its fuel spent, the plane came in and made a smooth belly landing.

"What were the three thinking about as they sweated it out? Why, said the pilot, Lt. R.Q.F. Evans, "We watched a cricket match while we went 'round and 'round the airfield."

Mrs. Jordan, 68, Dies Saturday

Peru Returns To Civilian Control Today

LIMA, Peru (AP)—After a year under military control, Peru returns to civilian rule Sunday with the inauguration of Fernando Belaunde Terry, a U.S.-educated architect, as president.

Promising to build homes for the poor and give land to peasants and illiterate Indians, Belaunde takes the leadership from Gen. Nicholas Lopez Lindley, one of the military men who took over one year and 10 days ago ousting President Manuel Prado at the end of his term.

A non-Communist leftist, Belaunde is widely considered to be pro-U.S. and has said his government would make no moves to re-establish diplomatic relations with Cuba. Peru was among the first of the larger Latin American nations to denounce Fidel Castro's regime in Cuba.

He has concentrated on the domestic and social problems of Peru, a nation of mountains and deserts on South America's west coast. Peru has nearly 11 million people, most of them descendants of the ancient Incas.

One top priority project is building highways to the interior of the country to tap the nation's rich natural resources.

Working to his disadvantage may be the Communists. They had thrown unsolicited support his way in the election. Some in Lima fear they will try to dominate Belaunde and infiltrate his government.

But Belaunde is likely to try to keep the Communists at bay. This could mean the Communists might switch to the opposition camps in an attempt to sabotage his administration.

Any concerted Communist effort might force the military to move in again.

Belaunde, 51 was educated at the University of Miami and the University of Texas. He is one of Peru's leading architects. He is separated from his wife. His daughter and two sons, all teenagers, live with him.

Rocking Chair, Back Pay Asked In Suit's Terms

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Jacob Henry Gordon, former service station manager, is suing his former employer for a rocking chair — and back wages.

Gordon filed two suits Friday in district court here against Speed Products Co., and its parent firm, Tenneco Oil Co.

The suits indicate Gordon was fired Aug. 2, 1962. In one, he seeks $75 in back wages, plus penalties of $50 a week until the $75 is paid, and attorney's fees as well.

The other suit claims he had taken an antique rocking chair, of much sentimental value, to the service station for his own use during working hours.

The suit claims he found the rocking chair had been given away by an employe of the firms after his discharge.

Briton Says Khrushchev Wants To 'Unwind' War

LONDON (UPI) — Lord Hailsham returned Saturday from the Moscow nuclear talks and said he gained the impression that Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev wants to "unwind the cold war a bit" and to attend a summit conference "at some time."

Lord Hailsham, the minister of science who attended the Moscow talks with U.S. presidential envoy W. Averell Harriman and initialed the partial agreement on Thursday, said in an airport statement he hoped "for a substantial change in the tone of the cold war."

"I think Premier Khrushchev is quite genuine in the attitude he has adopted to the question of war and peace," he said.

"I think it is logical if you take the view that he claims to take about war and peace and he should want to unwind the cold war a bit. This is an opportunity which ought not to be missed.

"My hope is that this agreement will be the beginning of a new relationship between East and West in which the cold war may be brought to an end by a series of further agreements."

Whether this will be so, would, however, depend on the attitude of peoples and governments. Britain, for one, is anxious to achieve such improvement, he said.

Hailsham hoped the signature of the test ban treaty, banning nuclear explosions in outer space under water and in the air will be "accompanied by other moves in the international sphere by the governments concerned" after consultation with the Allies.

He did not specify the type of measures contemplated for further East-West discussions but added the atmosphere engendered by the test ban treaty might lead to "measures in all things."

Referring to a series of East-West discussions expected to follow the Moscow accord Hailsham said Khrushchev had made it clear he was not seeking to achieve recognition of East Germany by this means.

He expressed concern at the possibility of further powers getting nuclear weapons by means of tests.

The major powers, therefore, wanted as many nations as possible to join the agreement.

Services To Aid In Quake District

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. military forces in Europe will offer any "possible or practical" assistance to earthquake victims in Skopje, Yugoslavia, the Defense Department announced Saturday.

A Pentagon spokesman said the aid was made available at the request of President Kennedy and Defense Secretary Robert McNamara.

He added, however, "as of now, we have no specifics on what assistance has been requested in Europe nor what may have already been provided."

TO DIPLOMATIC FIELD

Talk Of Shifting Freeman Growing

By OVID A. MARTIN
Associated Press Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Talk of shifting Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman to the diplomatic field is growing in official circles—much of it being promoted by his friends and admirers.

Other close associates, however, discount such speculation and say Freeman expects to stay in his present post for two full Kennedy Administrations.

Discussions of a transfer, for the most part, picture Freeman as ambassador to Mexico where he would be directed to help put more life into the lagging Alliance for Progress program to help Latin and South America develop their economies.

It is being said that Freeman's talents should not be wasted at the Agriculture Department where, some administration leaders say, there is little prospect for him or anyone else making progress toward adoption of Kennedy administration farm policies.

Freeman started out in 1961 to put into operation a broadened program of farmer-approved government commodity control programs designed to stabilize prices and supplies and eliminate surpluses. All hands agree that the secretary has worked diligently. But he has met with little success.

The Democratic-controlled Congress refused to give him stricter control measures, except in the case of wheat. And wheat controls were rejected by farmers in a stunning administration defeat at a recent national referendum.

Many political and farm observers contend that the pendulum of public thinking—including that of farmers—is swinging away from government intervention in agriculture. They say the administration should adjust its farm policies accordingly. Any such change, it is argued, should be made under a new secretary of agriculture, preferably a person not heretofore publicly identified with controls.

Movement of Freeman to another post presumably would make it easier for President Kennedy to revise his farm policies. The President, while a member of the Senate, supported policies that would reduce the federal role in agriculture. But his party's 1960 convention adopted a farm platform pointing in the other direction and Kennedy went along with it.

NAVY RETIRES SUB

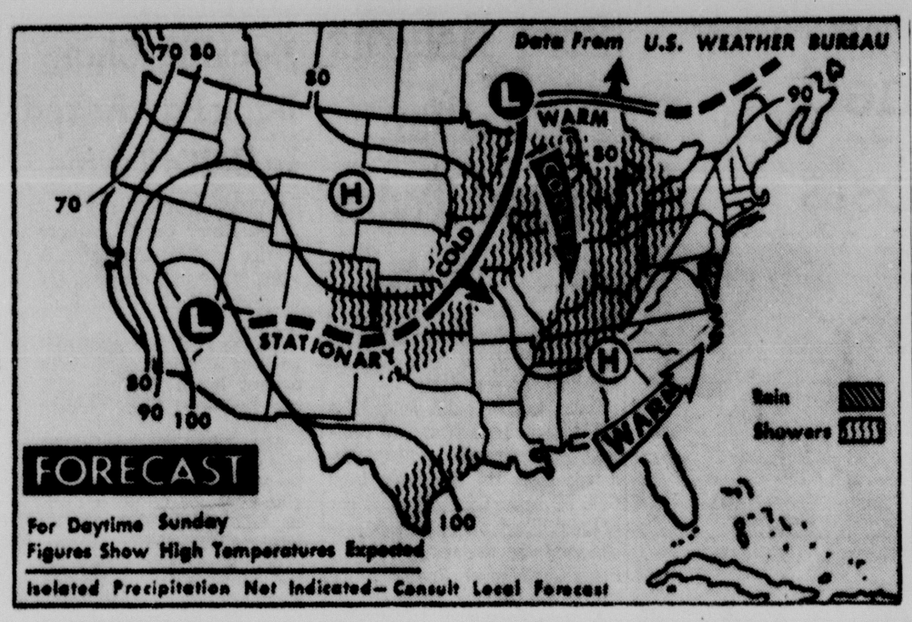
The 312-foot-long fleet-type conventional submersible displaces 1,900 tons. Conger was commissioned in 1944. On Oct. 3, 1955, she made dive No. 5,000. Since the Conger racked up an additional 7,257 dives, making a total of 12,257.



SHOWERS AND thundershowers will occur from the southcentral Plains through the upper Mississippi Valley and Great Lakes to the Appalachians and the Ohio and Tennessee Valleys. Sunny skies prevail over far west and northern Plains with heat wave in the northeast continuing. Partly cloudy skies elsewhere with warm and humid conditions except for a cooling trend over the upper Mississippi Valley into the Central Plains. (AP Wirephoto)

Salvage Vehicles Seen

WASHINGTON (AP)—Deep-diving salvage vehicles, capable of exploring the ocean bottom at nearly four miles depth for as long as a day at a time, appear in prospect by 1970, the Navy disclosed Saturday.

Such craft, the Navy indicated, would have endurance capabilities for undersea hunts far beyond those of the bathyscaphe Trieste, the Navy's only craft capable of even limited probing at depths to and beyond the 1½-mile debth where the sunken nuclear submarine Thresher now rests.

The Trieste can dive at least six miles but can remain on the bottom only four hours and explore only a square mile in any one dive. It has made four unsuccessful attempts to find the Thresher.

The Navy's expectations of having some super-Triestes by the end of this decade came to light in a report released by the White House Office of Science and Technology.

The report outlines a long-range "national oceanographic plan," proposing federal expenditures of $2.33 billion during the next 10 years, to step up oceanic research in military and peaceful fields.

The Navy disclosed that it has in mind three types of deep-dive vehicles. They are:

1. One designed for cruising along the Continental Shelf, able to dive to approximately one mile and cruise slowly for 8 to 10 hours.

2. Another intended to dive to nearly four miles and able to cruise slowly for as much as a day.

3. A third type intended for "deep trench" investigations at depths down to some 36,000 feet or nearly seven miles.

The report brought out that the Navy already is sponsoring development of a vehicle closely resembling the first type. This is a two-man submersible capable of diving to 6,000 feet, under construction by the General Mills Co. It is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

The report also related that the Navy is conspiring for use in its research program, a three-man submersible capable of 80-mile cruises at 15,000 to 18,000-foot depths.

This craft—close to the requirements for Type 2—is already under construction by the Electric Boat Co. of General Dynamics Corp., supported by the Reynolds Metal Co. Construction is expected to be completed next spring.

PACT HAILED

MADRAS, India (AP) — Prime Minister Nehru hailed the three-power partial nuclear test ban treaty Friday night and said "The United States, Soviet Russia and Great Britain deserve all our congratulatons."

He said he hoped the agreement would be "the first step toward lasting peace and disarmament."

Fee For Paying Taxes Possible

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin residents soon may be charged a fee for the privilege of paying their state income taxes.

The Senate has passed and sent to the Assembly a budget-tax bill which includes payment of a $2 filing fee with each state return.

"If you vote for this thing, you're nuts," Sen. Norman Sussman, D-Milwaukee, told his colleagues.

However, they didn't pay any attention to him, approving the bill Friday on a 24-8 vote. Democratic Gov. John Reynolds helped work out the budget-tax compromise with Republicans in this GOP-controlled Legislature.

HEMLINES STABLE

Soft Silhouettes Are Fashion Vogue

PARIS (AP)—Softly silhouetted sex emerged from the fall and winter style showings of top designers this week. Most hemlines stayed pretty well put, just covering the knee, but Jacques Heim dropped them about three inches.

Dior revealed some of the most seductive bosoms ever shown in public for cocktail and evening dresses. The effect was achieved largely through uplift manipulation.

Two conflicting schools treat the soft silhouette. One by Philippe Venet and Courreges, disciples of Givenchy and Balenciaga, is based on disciplined construction. But Dior, Balmain, Patou, Heim, Griffe and Ricci think more of women than of Euclid.

Three other houses jiggered the hemline in a minor way. Ricci dropped coats for young students four inches, Cardin bared the knee in his sportswear line, and Courreges put them right on the kneecap.

Necklines for daytime were generally built up. The cowl was a favorite, climbing the neckline often with a scarf wound around and bowed. Cardin tailored it in a pointed chasuble buttoned down in the center front.

Guy Laroche based his whole collection on the cowl-necked middy tunic. Griffe did an extreme cowl tailoring it for daytime and turning it into a fan for evening.

Among the colors were the mustards of France—Dijon forte, Tarragon—All the dead leaf browns and russets from snuff to orange, and all the blues from the Mediterranean to the chilly English Channel. A pretty forget-me-not blue was for debutantes.

People were saying there is not a cobra left in Madagascar—they have all been bagged by haute courture, their skins used in Roger Vivier's shoes, Capucci's dickeys and hats, Courreges' boots and hats, and Lanvin's coat.

EXPRESS APPROVAL

Ellender, Long Hopeful Of Pact

World Capital Bureau

WASHINGTON — Louisiana Senators Allen J. Ellender and Russell Long have expressed cautious approval of a limited nuclear test ban treaty between the United States and Russia.

They indicated the treaty — to be submitted soon to the Senate for ratification — contains sufficient escape clauses to protect U. S. if Russia resumes testing.

Ellender said that "the time is ripe for the U. S. and Russia to come to such an agreement."

He said he has long felt "that our nation could not continue to carry our tremendous defense expenditures indefinitely into the future."

Although the American atomic arsenal could destroy Russia several times over, he said, "Our nation is running pell - mell down the road to fiscal disaster, and we are being prodded on and encouraged by our so called military experts."

Long, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which will hold hearings on the treaty, said, "I think this is the most hopeful thing that has happened in a number of years."

A serious health danger from radiation will occur if atmospheric testing goes on indefinitely, he said. "The idea is to give human beings some chance to live their life in good health and some chance to protect man from the scourage of atomic warfare."

Long said the fact France is not a party to the treaty does not necessarily weaken the pact. "Let's face it," he said. "France is many years behind us and the Soviet Union and she does not pose what we regard as a real threat to the U. S."

Ellender also called for increased exchange programs between the U. S. and Russia "to allow the citizens of the U.S.S.R. to see American life as it really is."

As the Russians become more and more prosperous, he said, "They will tend to move further and further from the pernicious ideas of the Communist state. Communism appeals only to people who are so economically depressed that they have nothing to lose by placing all power in the state."

A test ban treaty, he said, may be a first step in removing the Russian atmosphere of misstrust and suspicion. "To hope that this will not be the case, as some do, means acceptance of the idea that our two countries will forever be at each other's throats, or that a third world war is inevitable. I, for one, would hate to think there was no other choice."

Six Injured In Accidents

Six persons sustained minor injuries in four separate automobile accidents in and around the Twin Cities Saturday, with three of the collisions occurring on rainslick streets.

Around 8 a.m. Saturday, William Mitchell Jr., 31, of 405 Gulpha Dr., Apt. 10, West Monroe, sustained a severe laceration of the head and possible fractured skull when he was involved in a wreck at Audubon and Gulpha Dr. Mitchell, driving south on Gulpha, entered into the intersection and collided with a truck headed east on Audubon Street by William R. Gates, 69, of 1007 Meadowbrook St. Mitchell was ticketed for running a stop sign. He was rushed to Glenwood hospital for emergency treatment.

Two teenagers suffered cuts, bruises and abrasions Saturday when their car crashed off Loop Road into a telephone pole. The boys, Mack J. Marsh, 15-year-old driver, of 707 Downy Ln., Monroe, and Reggie Henry, 14, 1707 Emerson St., were rushed to St. Francis hospital for treatment by Mulhearn ambulance. Marsh, according to police, lost control of his late model sedan as he was driving north on Loop Road and the right wheel left the pavement. The car skidded approximately 90 feet before crashing into a telephone pole, and careened on for another 10 to 12 feet before stopping. Police made no charges in the accident.

Around 5 p.m. a 66-year-old Monroe man, Enoch W. Goleman, of 2303 Dick Taylor St., was hit by a car as he attempted to cross Lee Avenue near its intersection with Jack McEnery Street, Goleman, who told police he didn't see the oncoming car because of poor eyesight, was given emergency treatment for minor injuries at St. Francis hospital. Avis Halley Haynes, 25, 3209 Lee Ave., told police that by the time she realized he didn't see her car, she was unable to stop before striking the old man. No charges were filed by investigating officers.

Around 9 p.m. Saturday, two women sustained possibly fractured ribs and lacerations when both were involved in a two - car collision on U. S. Highway 80 west, near its intersection with the new I-20 highway near Calhoun. Mabel Foster, in her 30's, of Rt. 1, Calhoun, was driving west on the highway when her car went into a spin and crashed into a second vehicle headed east. The other car, driven by William E. Lea, 15, of Rt. 4, Box 207, West Monroe, had seen her coming and pulled to the side of the highway to avoid being hit. Mrs. Eva Lea, 40, of Rt. 4, Box 207, West Monroe, along with Mrs. Foster, was rushed to Glenwood Hospital by Kilpatrick ambulance for treatment. Mrs. Lea was in the car with her son. According to witnesses, the Foster woman was thrown from the car. The investigation was incomplete late Saturday.

Other activities in the Twin Cities remained relatively quiet, with Monroe officers investigating the burglary of the Negro American Legion Hall on Powell Avenue. Around $8 was taken from the jukebox after the party or parties gained entrance. Also booked for theft in a shoplifting incident late Friday was Nellie DeLee, 68, of 1020 N. 7th St.

TUG OF WAR

Mother And Bear Fight For Girl

SANTA SUSANA, Calif., (AP) — Sheriff's officers say a huge black bear and a young girl's mother engaged in a frantic tug-of-war when the little girl playfully put her hand through the bars of a circus cage.

Lynn Seely, 4, escaped the claws of the bear only after a bystander bludgeoned the animal with a length of pipe. The child suffered a double arm fracture and the loss of one finger.

Investigators gave this account of the struggle late Friday:

Mrs. Margaret Seely and her daughter were visiting the Ted Duane Circus when the child put her arm into the cage. The bear, a 5-year-old male Himalayan, at first only licked the arm.

Before the child could withdraw her arm the bear attacked.

Mrs. Seely grabbed Lynn's other arm and pulled. She yanked the bear's fur in a desperate effort to free her daughter. But the bear held on until Steve Pelter intervened with the pipe.

History Of France Is Story Over 2,000 Years Long

By Paul EVE
United Press International

PARIS (UPI) — On a promontory overlooking the Mediterranean above Monte Carlo is the ruin of a mighty Roman monument with an inscription stating it was built to commemorate the pacification of the Alpine tribes.

This boast by Augustus Caesar nearly 2,000 years ago is the first page of the history of France.

Over the years and centuries since that famous campaign, France has evolved from a group of petty kingdoms — consolidated under one monarch in the middle ages — into a world power which by some curious alchemy is practically all things to all men.

Some see the French as grasping and commercial. Others hail them for their love of culture. And there are various shades of opinion in between. Paris is the capital of France but many people in many countries claim it as a spiritual or second home.

Smaller Than Texas

The country in which 47,600,000 Frenchmen live has an area of 212,659 square miles, smaller than Texas but half again as big as California. It is the most westerly nation in continental Europe, its shores washes on the west by the Atlantic, the Bay of Biscay and the English Channel and on the south by the Mediterranean.

It borders, in clockwise order, Belgium, Luxemburg, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Spain. But France also includes, besides the homeland, the Mediterranean island of Corsica and a dozen overseas departments in the Pacific and Indian oceans and the West Indies.

As in most countries, the people of Paris and the bigger cities are the more sophisticated. The region of Alsace and other areas near the German border breeds a hard-working and, so Parisians say, a less humorous race than the other parts of the country. The tough mountain areas where life is hard to win from the soil produces a dour and rugged type but the western and southern peoples are sunnier and more carefree.

Most Are Farmers

With France's vast fertile tracts of land it is not surprising that one Frenchman out of every three takes his living from the soil. Predominant among them are those who raise the grapes for the wine harvest which makes the country the premier wine nation of the world.

The country produces virtually every other sort of agricultural product, far more than the requirements of its own people. But organization of farm sales is poor and there is a constant campaign to put the farming industry into proper shape.

Beneath the soil lie important deposits of coal, iron and other minerals, oil and natural gas. The country's iron ore and bauxite deposits are among the richest in the world. France has also adopted atomic energy to provide power and has at least a dozen atomic reactors.

Free Enterprise System

Most industry is run on free enterprise lines but the government runs the railroads, the coal, gas, electricity and natural gas industries. Some enterprises including airlines and the giant Renault automobiles works are nationalized.

Much of the first half of this century saw France economically and politically disorganized and twice ravaged by world wars. But the return to power in 1958 of World War II hero President Charles de Gaulle began a period of firm rule and economic and political rehabilitation. A "national renovation", De Gaulle called it. The country also prospered economically and in 1962 boomed to a greater extent than any other Western European nation.

Politically De Gualle brought the nation from a postwar state in which it wallowed under squabbling governments that sometimes lasted little more than a few days to a seemingly stable regime.

UNR Supports De Gaulle

The most important party in present-day France is the Union for a New Republic (UNR) which supports De Gaulle and with its adherent groups gives him an overall majority in the National Assembly to push his plans through Parliament.

The Communists, are more vocal than effective, they have 800,000 card-carrying members and 41 deputies out of the assembly's 443 members, ranking in the National Assembly behind the Socialists and leftist-center Democrats.

A typical worker is Jean Desnies whose pay packet from the Renault works at Flins west of Paris is a basic 900 francs ($180) a month plus overtime pay at 350 francs ($70). His wife Zarah also works and earns 700 francs ($140) a month in the same factory. Both receive bonuses of about one month's pay per year, a French custom that provides workers with a 13th month's pay.

Live in Apartment

They live 10 miles from the factory in the outskirts of the industrial town of Mantes La Jolie, in an apartment they bought for $6,000. It has six rooms, is half of an old-type house and Desnies now is modernizing it and installing a bathroom. The kitchen is modern and fitted with new refrigerator - it cost about a fortnight's work - and modern gas stove and sink fittings.

France has 3,512,000 television sets but the Desnies do not plan to buy one until the two children have finished their education. Dominique, their 15 years old son, goes daily to Paris to a design school which, including fares and lunches, cost his father about $70 a month. Agnes, 12, goes to the local grammar school.

Schooling up to junior college level is free for all French children, except for cost of books. The country's literacy level is high.

Immense Tourist Trade

It is literally true that many tourists come to France mainly to eat, but the immense tourist trade of the country is also based on the indefinable glamor of Paris, "City of Light", the Mediterranean playgrounds of the south, the ski resorts of the east and the art and culture of the country and the clothes it produces for women.

Last year 6 million tourists brought an estimated $1.2 billion to the country.

Paris is a high fashion capital of the world. Such Fashion houses as Dior, Balmain, Givenchy, Chanel and St. Laurent set trends for what women the world over will wear. To women from the United States and elsewhere the value of that "little thing I picked up in a Paris boutique" is inestimable.

Churches Asked To Join March

Work Of Mechanical Genius Recalled

One of America's most fabulous success stories is that of Henry Ford, a Michigan boy who left his father's farm to become the tycoon of the Model T. His birth 100 years ago will be commemorated this week.

DETROIT (AP) — A simple ceremony on the farmland where he was born will highlight Michigan's observance this week of the centennial of its most famous son —the late Henry Ford.

People from all walks of life, ranging from Gov. George Romney to Dearborn school children whose pennies paid for a $1,500 plaque at the farm, will commemorate Ford's birth July 30, 1863, in a farmhouse near suburban Dearborn.

Ford's three grandsons—Henry II, Benson, and William Clay, — all key executives with the motor company their grandfather founded, will participate.

Top event will be the dedication Tuesday of the plaque marking the site on which stood the farmhouse from whence Ford went forth to international fame.

FARM LIFE

Ford, son of a farmer, took a short fling at farm life himself before rebelling at the drudgery of the work and setting out on a career that was to make him the world's best known automotive figure.

His most fantastic success was in the building of the Model T Ford which he once said "put wheels under the world." More than 15½ million of these four cylinder, plain-looking cars were turned out and were found in every nook and corner of the world.

Many of Ford's actions were controversial, but few would doubt that he deserved recognition as one of the greatest mechanical geniuses of all time.

Money came to him easily within months after he founded the Ford Motor Co. in 1903 with just $28,000 in cash—none of it his. His ideas for speedy, mass production of autos on a moving assembly line soon made Ford the No. 1 auto maker of the world.

PRODUCTION SPEEDUP

Up to the time that Ford put the assembly line principle into operation, it had taken an average of 12½ hours to turn out a car. Ford was impatient with that slow pace. He wanted to build a lot of cars at a price the average wage earner could afford.

The assembly line idea, crude at first, soon won world acclaim for Ford and by 1920, he was turning out a car a minute.

The Ford Motor Co. soon became the automotive production leader of the world. From 1903 to 1927, the company piled up $900 million in profits.

WEARING HIS Sunday best and a jaunty mustache, 33-year-old Henry Ford sits in his first car, the "quadricycle," in 1896. The car, powered by a two-cylinder, four cycle engine, had an electric bell in front to warn pedestrians. Ford, an ardent pacifist, got some of his most adverse publicity with his actions before the United States got into World Wars I and II.

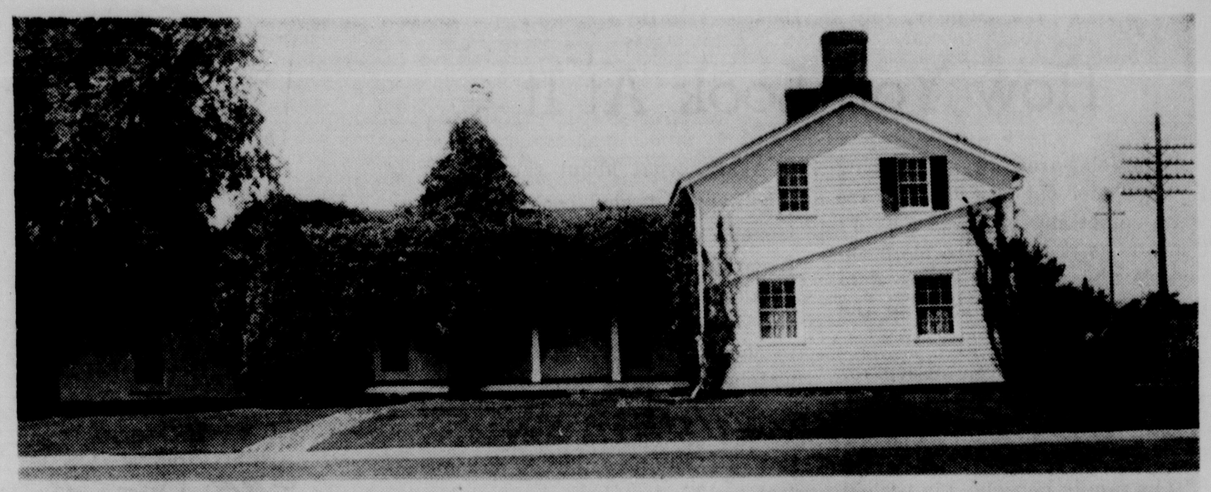
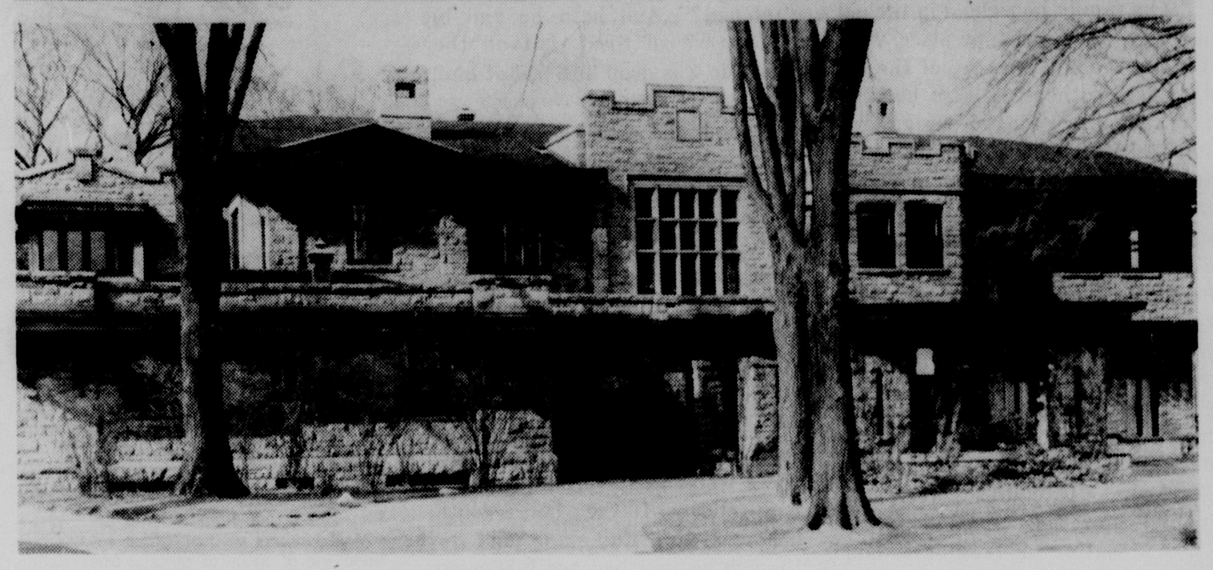
In World War I, he spent over a half million dollars in organizing a peace ship which was to take a group of leading world figures to Europe to "get the boys out of the trenches before Christmas" of 1916.

When the United States got into the first World War, Ford put the full facilities of his company at government disposal and built a wide variety of government-ordered items, ranging from ambulances to Eagle boats—predecessors of the PT boats of World War II.

Historians generally concede that Ford made a major mistake in the late 1920s when he retained full control of company policy, even though Edsel held the title of president. Ford, faced with increasing competition from General Motors and Chrysler, still turned out its old standby, the Model T, until 1927, when customer and dealer demand forced the company to bring out the Model A.

When war clouds threatened again, Ford—who accepted a controversial decoration from the Nazi German government in 1938 —was again strongly opposed to U.S. entry into war. But again when Pearl Harbor stunned the nation, Henry Ford put his entire effort into aiding the U.S. military operation.





WHERE IT BEGAN — and ended. Top: The farmhouse near Dearborn, Mich., in which Henry Ford was born July 30, 1863. The 100th anniversary of the event will be marked July 30 by dedication of a plaque on site where the farmhouse stood. Bottom: Fair Lane, the palatial home which Henry Ford built in 1915 on a 1,240-acre estate in Dearborn. It was his 15th and final home, in which he died April 7, 1947. Fair Lane now houses the Ford Motor Company Archives, including 5-million records and 25,000 photographs. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

BOMBER PLANT

One of his notable achievements was the building of the huge Willow Run bomber plant in Michigan which used auto production line methods to turn out nearly 400 bombers a month.

The senior Ford suffered a mild stroke in 1939 and another early in World War II, but kept in close contact with his company's operations. He was deeply affected when Edsel died of cancer in May 1943. Henry reassumed the presidency of the company, although he was 80 years old.

His grandson, Henry II, who was in Navy service, was released and joined the company, as did Benson Ford. Some reports said the senior Ford was anxious to transfer both grandsons to a California plant to get them out of his way.

BECAME VICE PRESIDENT

Henry II became a vice president of the company however, and in 1945, succeeded his grandfather as president. He was aided in this by his grandmother, Clara Ford, and his mother, Mrs. Edsel Ford, both of whom convinced Ford senior that it was time for him to step aside and end his one-man rule. It had brought Ford to the pinnacle but left it in poor shape to face the challenge of the 1940s.

Henry Ford II began reorganizing the company high command, bringing in such top men as Robert S. McNamara, who later became Ford president and then secretary of defense.

Henry Ford senior lived in semi-retirement for the remainder of his life.

Ironically, on the night he died—April 7, 1947—in his palatial $2-million home Fair Lane in suburban Dearborn, a flooding river had knocked out the electric power and telephone. Ford, born in a farm house equipped only with candles, died with only a few candles lighting his bedroom.

Scientists Check On Weightlessness, The 'Thief' In Space

By JOHN BARBOUR

It grants the heart, muscles and bone a vacation from gravity.

It also poses a serious question: If a space pilot must make a quick emergency landing to some isolated, wild spot where help is not available, can he survive? If he calls on his vacationing heart to return quickly to gravity-work, can his body respond?

Space doctors expected a reaction from astronaut L. Gordon Cooper Jr. after his 34-hours in space. They got it. He became dizzy on emerging from his spacecraft.

"In an emergency procedure, you can't rule out the possibility a man might be in trouble," said flight surgeon Dr. Charles Berry in an interview at the manned spacecraft center here.

RETURN PROBLEM

So far, Berry says, there are no problems to weightlessness itself, only to the return to earth's gravity after weightlessness.

"When we started," astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. said, "people predicted that the effects of weightlessness would be horrible."

But we have found that man can operate just as well in space as he can on the ground. That is the main thing Project Mercury was supposed to do."

But like it or not, weightlessness is not the normal state for the human body. In space the heart's job is easier. Like any muscle, it adjusts to its new life of relative leisure.

Stay in bed a few days and you get an inkling of what weightlessness does. When you stand up, you may get dizzy. Get over that and you may find you are generally weaker. A small effort makes your heart pound, your breathing rapid.

For a person who has suffered an attack of polio, the results of muscle inactivity are dramatic. The messages to muscles from the nervous system don't get through. Deprived of these, the muscle remains inactive and wastes away.

Of course a space pilot can control his muscles, make them work, just as a therapist exercises the idle muscles of the polio patient. Nevertheless, the weightless state was taxing for the heart muscles of two astronauts.

After six orbits, Walter M. Schirra Jr. had signs of the problem — a dusky color to his legs and feet. Doctors diagnosed blood pooling because of low blood pressure. They found the heart rate was high, working extra hard against gravity, but unable to keep up the pressure.

Doctors were especially watchful of Cooper. They wanted to keep his legs inactive late in the flight to accentuate the problem. But Cooper had to stretch because his space suit was rubbing on his knees, causing discomfort.

As soon as Cooper stepped from his spacecraft the symptoms were evident. Doctors found he didn't have blood pooling, but he did show a high heart rate and low blood pressure.

Before and after the flight, Cooper lay on a tilting table for long periods. Occasionally doctors brought the table to an erect position and measured heart rate and blood pressure.

By using the table to get Cooper erect, they took the astronaut's muscles out of play—and the chance that those muscles would squeeze the blood vessels and help the blood flow.

BEFORE FLIGHT

Before the flight his blood pressure averaged 105 over 87. After the flight it was 90 over 73. The numbers represent the blood pressure during the pump phase compared with the rest phase pressure.

Both Cooper and Schirra lost their return-to-gravity syndrome during sleep. Cooper had more severe reactions for something less than 16 hours, while Schirra's lasted 20 hours.

The question is, says Berry: Can you expose men to weightlessness for four or five days without any more of a problem than this?

He also wants to know if Cooper's dehydration—he lost seven pounds, mostly water—and his reduced food intake contributed to the condition.

Berry also would like to pursue the Soviet report that there is evidence of calcium-wasting in longer space flights. Some researchers have found this in bedridden patients.

But a careful check of Cooper's blood and urine failed to show any unusual calcium loss.

It's not likely this will be a problem, Berry said—but it is interesting from a scientific point of view.

RESPONSE

Bone, like muscle, theoretically should respond to a vacation from gravity as it does to a vacation from activity.

A long-term flight, space officials agree, will give the answers about weightlessness. The Soviet Union likely has the answers already. Their latest space feat was a weightless endurance record of 119 hours—with no announced ill effects.

Doctors know that weightlessness is a sort of space thief that can rob the body of its vitality.

It likely won't rob man of the chance of exploring space, because it can be thwarted by either artificial gravity or special exercises and equipment.

But doctors don't want to have their astronauts fainting far from help on an emergency landing in the middle of the Indian Ocean. Nor do they want an ailing astronaut alone on the dusty surface of the moon.

How You Look At It

Some folks are always hankering for the "good old days," as if there were, something hallowed about them or as if they were more enjoyable and more righteous than the present days. It is all in the way you look at it.

Apparently in a reminiscent or nostalgic mood, an editorial writer for the Aztec, N. M., Independent - Review commented:

"The family household in the old days was a busy, happy place, with the big kids taking care of the little kids, mother was kept busy in the kitchen, cooking, ironing, sewing and peeling and cooking vegetables out of the garden or cellar and chopping off a chicken's head and picking it. The old man worked 12 hours a day for three bucks to keep the household going. For some reason in those days folks were paying their bills, the divorce courts had no business, folks were not suing each other for an easy buck, and no one was having a nervous breakdown, and nobody knew what a tranquilizer was. Isn't it odd how they lived?"

As a matter of fact, it is odd how they lived and most of them didn't — very long. In those days the average life was about 30 years compared to some 67 years for men and some 73 years for women now on an average. From one-fourth to one-third of the children died in infancy or early childhood, and this drastically cut the average life span.

And about no tranquilizers and not much of any other kind of medicine. In those days family connections which did not have at least one member who was "a little tetched in the head" were rare and often there were more than one. Reported insanity cases then were fewer than now for the simple reason nobody reported them because there was nowhere to send those who were thus ill.

Again, what about the mother who happily peeled, cooked, sewed, ironed, scrubbed, carried water from the old well, did the washing on a corrugated board, gave nauseous doses of ineffective medicine to her children and eventually watched as two or three out of her eight or 10 died? And the old man worked 12 hours a day and also saw his children die or become "tetched?" And both he and his wife were so tired that all they could do was drop into bed at night and go to sleep.

Even if the old man and his wife hated each other, which they often did, partly because of nothing but monotonous work, they usually stayed together and fought and quarreled or the stronger one abused the other, but the divorce rate was low.

In "the good old days," if the old man or his wife or their children had a headache, they had to "grin and bear" it, because then there was no aspirin and no other pain-reliever. If they had a toothache, it was the same and for those who had bad teeth it eventually meant toothlessness.

Because of these things, give us the tranquilizers and the aspirin and the "miracle drugs," the household conveniences, the shorter hours and, in some cases, even the divorces.

"The good old days" were good in many ways and they were the best they had at that time. At least, in "the good old days", they had independence. And they often had happiness, just as people now do.

In "the good old days" such things as a belief in the Divine Creator, upright, high - standard lives, justice, freedom of the individual and democracy were among the things that counted most for happiness and successful living. They still are.

Giving Too Cheerfully

Practically everyone loves a cheerful giver, particularly if he is giving away his own money but many of us are beginning to be doubtful about how cheerful we want Uncle Sam to be when he gives away money he has collected from us in taxes.

One would not think Uncle Sam would insist on giving away money to those who don't want it and are asking him to save it but that is not always true.

Take the case of Kingfisher, a small town in Oklahoma, and Kingfisher's Chamber of Commerce. If the government listens to the Chamber of Commerce, it can save $110,000 but if it were to do that it probably would waste the money in some other way, not knowing what to do with it.

Kingfisher is not growing fast and naturally is not bursting out at the seams. Therefore, the Chamber of Commerce voted to ask Uncle Sam not to build a new, block-long postoffice building in their town, especially in view of the fact that the postoffice department is pictured as being hard up every time a postage rate increase is asked. Members decided the present postoffice building is just fine for the purpose.

Kingfisher is right in being worried about that national debt, despite the spenders' cheery assurances that it's really all right because "we owe it to ourselves' and it isn't large in proportion to what we earn as it once was at the height of our biggest war.

As Representative Jensen, (R., Iowa), pointed out the other day, each American family now pays $15 a month in taxes just to pay the interest on that national debt. So, without paying any of it off, the interest on the national debt is costing everybody in Kingfisher and elsewhere more than any of their utility bills.

Any concern for thrift will have to come from the grassroots, in Kingfisher and elsewhere. From Washington budgeteers come only proposals for expanding the debt. From the general accounting office we learn that government bureaus are wasting millions — many times the cost of the Kingfisher post office — every day.

The department of defense, for example, is costing the average family $75 a month, according to Representative Jensen. GAO finds the air force wasted $10 million by throwing out perfectly good repair kits, and a million dollars to store oil in Plattsburg, N. Y., just because it wanted to use up its appropriation at the end of the year.

Thanks to Kingfisher, though we taxpayers may get a small break. If other areas follow Kingfisher's example, we may all get a large one.

Still Standing Tall

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

It would seem we have another Pharisee in our midst — the unethical ravings of this person remind me of those of quite a few of our so-called "higher-ups" in Washington and the United Nations — so much "hot air". He uses a lot of high sounding phrases some of which are almost as asinine as are those of our last two U. N. ambassadors.

It is refreshing to have a difference of opinion, as we do now learn from the opposite side of the fence, but when one uses four and five syllable words to express his displeasure of a thing, when one or two short words would accomplish his purpose, it resembles an aura of that "over - educated, self - indulgent, supercilious, Harvardian type of mouse, ranting loudly of world affairs, and one-world type of existence, but forgetting that this country, this America is paying almost all the bills for such.

As for your paper being "lily-white" and a "slander sheet," let me state that in the many years I have lived in this city, I have enjoyed it immensely, even during my sojourn overseas in World War II and Korea. My wife sent me many of Westbrook Pegler's columns, along with those of some of the other real American columnists writing in your newscasts.

When it comes down to editorials, David Lawrence, Bascom Timmons, Holmes Alexander, Henry J. Taylor, Allen and Scott, plus Fulton Lewis, Jr., it is hard to beat such a group of writers, not to mention your own columns. To me, considering the kind of static released on TV, Radio and CBS, NBC and ABC by the left wing, calling each and every one to the right "Birchites, Radicals, and other bad names, it seems that you are only trying to let the world, this country, this state and the local population know, in no uncertain terms, what is going on here in the "land of the FREE." Just do not change because of such cynicism.

When I was in school, I too was taught to respect the office of the President, the Congress and others there, as well as the Justice Department and the Supreme Court. That was many years ago, before the doings of the last 30 years. Since that time, I have seen men elected to office, men appointed to office, who were no more fitted for such appointments than I would be, simply to "pack" the Court, or pay off a political debt. We have such now.

Gives Hearty Amen

Farmerville, La.

To the Editor:

I would like to add a hearty Amen to the letter of Mr. Gilbert in last Sunday's World. He said some things which have needed printing ever since you took up your cause against Kennedy immediately after his election. To be against any candidate is anyone's privilege and to dislike a man or disagree with his policies is one thing, but to constantly and daily revile and demean the office of the President of the U. S. and every member of his family (I believe you even had one editorial on the Sinatra Clan which was rather stooping toward Dorothy Kilgallen's type of thing) is a completely different thing and is setting the worst type of example for our children.

To illustrate my point: just this past week I overheard two preteenagers in a name calling spat. The first said "You're Khrushchev," the second, "Okay, Castro." the first (obviously feeling he was getting the last word, "Yah, Kennedy, Kennedy, Kennedy". We parents are cautioned not to criticize our childrens' teachers, or the pastor of our church, or Daddy's boss in their immediate presence; but how much worse is it to teach them they need not respect the man who is occupying the seat of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and others whom they are taught to revere in school.

As I said, I respect any man's right to disagree actively with Kennedy's policies or to campaign vigorously for whomever he should choose, but the type of insinuation, insult and near slander which is printed daily in this (and other) papers, and is heard from many adults amounts to sheer repudiation of the office which is recognized as the most influential in the world.

It is a puzzle to me how the "super patriots," "America-Firsters" and dozens of speakers on "Americanism" who are riding a crest of popularity now (preaching "Conventional wisdom" as I believe John Galbraith called it), can fail to see that by their words and actions they are lowering the influence and prestige of the very office to which they would like to elect their candidates and are therefore hurting these candidates as well as future presidents for whom our children (then adults) have learned they need not have any respect.

Pleads To Americans

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

This is a plea from the heart of one American to all others to awaken and stand alert, for if we don't we will surely fail.

How sad it is to pick up your morning paper and read about the President's news conference and his statement that the Communists may have a role in the racial situation but had no proof. How long does it take such a learned man, holder of the highest position in our wonderful land, to wake up to this fact?

Anyone with a little common sense would know this.

Whenever I read of troops being sent into one of our states where racial violence is taking place I think, "Don't they know that they are doing exactly what the Communists want." I can hear "old" Fidel and Nikita saying, "Let's get them to fighting among themselves and we'll walk in and take over." I don't think people believe this, but I do.

How many of our brave souls alike, to be to lose our freedom dom? Is the outcome of all our struggles, for white and black alike, ot be to lose our freedom and all rights it has to offer?

I had, up until a short time ago, never paid much attention to politics, I wasn't even a registered voter. I am fairly young and I always left it up to the other fellow to do his share and mine too. It took me a long time to wake up. I hope that it is in time to do my share.

All the publicity from racial demonstrations is twisted to fit any propaganda that is needed to make us look as small and stupid as possible.

Why do our government officials sit back and let such things occur?

The Kennedy administrations' policy of a "New Frontier"should be called the "Open Door Policy". Anyone can go, come, and take anything they want in the way of military weapons, money, etc. and its poured through our doors like water out of a pitcher.

One of the main reasons our country was founded was for religious freedom and yet our children are denied the right for prayer and possession of Bibles in school. Is the time come that we cannot even carry a Bible in public? How many card - carrying Communists are in our schools today, teaching our little ones with a free hand?

What will the fate of our tomorrow be with such teaching?

Will we stand together or fall from ignorance of what is happening?

Get out and vote and pray for God's guidance and protection.

Approves Editorials

Choudrant, La.

To the Editor:

I have thought of writing you for some time to thank you for your timely and very informative editorials and to express my humble opinions about world conditions and about the remedy for our troubles.

First of all I want to heartily agree with one of the greatest American generals and a great Christian too, that our troubles are spiritual and therefore they can be solved only by a spiritual about face.

The whole answer to our disastrous predicament is found in 2nd Chronicles 7:14 and if we as a nation will meet these conditions then and only then will we have leaders with spiritual wisdom to lead us in a safe and sound way.

The Bible also says "righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people"; so why do we expect God's blessing when all we have earned is reproach and strife.

The Supreme Court of the United States can outlaw prayer or reading of the Holy Scriptures in public schools or other public places, but the Supreme Judge will still provide for His own.

And, again I want to thank you for publishing so many articles and cartoons of a religious nature, which portrays the spiritual expression so lacking in most newspapers.

In regard to the one criticizing your editorials and comments in his letter to Views of Our Readers, Sunday, July 21, I know he is expressing the view held by a very, very few and most of these have a personal ambitious ax to grind.

As for your editorials against Kennedy, personally, I can't recall a single one in which you were against him personally, but against the things which he did that in your opinion were against the welfare and safety of the United States.

I notice some of the writers to The View of Our Readers criticize everybody that disagrees with Kennedy's action and one of their pet grievances or claims is that we don't offer a better alternative plan, but the truth of the matter is that we have the best plan ever devised by man for the government to go by and that is the Constitution of the United States, and if Kennedy would work as hard to uphold the Constitution as he seems to be to discard some of it, I for one could find far less fault with his actions.

I believe as one Farm Magazine publisher said, Kennedy is proving it is dangerous to have a president.

Press Is Criticized

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

It is hoped that some day the public will become more aware of the outright lies and distorted reporting in our American press. It is little wonder that reporters are sometimes hindered in their activities in various countries.

And just because you get a news item from a wire service does not absolve you from the responsibility of printing accurate reports, for the means to ascertain facts are within your grasp.

The matter in question here refers to your persistent hammering away with news items at the "predominantly Roman Catholic government of Diem" in Vietnam, together with the general charge that Buddhists are persecuted.

The enclosed list of facts from Fr. O'Connor, writing from Saigon to the National Catholic Welfare Conference News Service in Washington, should be enough to make you check your news reports. Isn't it strange that the first reports from your wire services used the phrase "Roman Catholic dominated government" and now have switched to "predominantly Catholic government"? This is a good example of a common practice these days of conditioning public opinion, developed into a science by the communists.

If there are, let's say, 16 deep south senators in a Senate of 100 members, would you say the Senate is predominantly southern? Could you say they dominate the Senate? It may be possible, but highly improbable. Then how can one say a government is predominantly Catholic, or dominated by Catholics, if only 5 of 17 cabinet ministers are Catholic, 3 of 19 generals in the army, etc. on down the line?

As to the subject of persecution, the charge is actually farcical. The order to put down that first Buddhist demonstration, which was getting out of hand, was given by a Buddhist general, as you will note in the enclosed clipping marked "II". Even the demand to fly the Buddhist flag was granted by the government, the original cause of the whole Buddhist uproar. We don't deny local governments in our southern communities the right to control demonstrations, yet we challenge the right of a foreign government at war to maintain civil order in serious times. This whole matter is an internal security affair which certain elements are exploiting as religious persecution.

Hence, I'm appalled at the ridiculous charge of Sen. Wayne Morse in that we withdraw military aid from South Vietnam because of the atrocious and tyrannical government of Diem. If Diem is acting as a dictator, and this can be challenged, Sen. Morse seems to forget that the U. S. interned citizens of Japanese descent and the President assumed certain dictatorial powers during World War II. In wartime, this is considered necessary.

I'm further amazed at the distortion of facts advanced by Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary in New York and the Episcopal Bishops of California, Dr. Harry E. Fosdick and the Rev. James Pike. Even the State Department was surprised at their charges, an agency of the government we often feel is not to warm towards anti-communists—which the Diem government certainly is.

Isn't it strange that the only place in the world right now where some headway is being made against communists, that attacks are being mounted to undermine the success?

Or is this so strange, after all?

Appreciation Expressed

To the Editor:

It is with sincere pleasure that we write this letter as a small token to express our gratitude and appreciation for the willing cooperation that your personnel of the news media has given our Society since we organized last October.

We gratefully acknowledge that you have never refused to make any announcements or statements by our publicity chairman, regardless of how small or incidental, but have always been eager to assist and advise, without obligation.

Deep appreciation was felt by our membership when you used valuable time and spared no expense to help us express our views and convictions in regard to the Poverty Point issue.

Many times words cannot express appreciation as it is felt. This is one of those times.

Editorials Are Hot

Girard, La.

The letter to the Editor, in Sunday's 21st, July, Morning World, indicated development of a condition, from exhausted patience, in parabolic terms, to a voluptuous characteristic of cases, when the victims, are exposed to ecumenical enigma.

It is easy to agree with the writer, there are two sides to most issues, though they may be so well hidden, and flexible, they can not be joined, and surfaced. After such build up in the smoldering processes by political chicanery, to be exploded in to the faces of the American People, in ruthless tactics, backed by military forces, at the will of the President and Attorney General in violation of the laws, and constitutions, Federal and State, you learned about when a child, along the lines of virtuous training, you referred to.

Any one not able to see and feel the designed efforts of these named organizations would have to be afflicted with a case of apathy dangerous to life.

May the editors of the newspapers that have the virtue and courage to expose these operatives, with sanction of the political dictatorial powers, we are at this present time pestered with, gain strength in their efforts, to establish in the hearts and minds of the public their duties and obligations to our posterity, the preservations of our customs and Constitutional Government, that has withstood chaotic conditions of the past. No one will ever succeed in their diabolical schemes to destroy the sanctity of the American homes as long as our editors and leaders in Congress spare no energy, in their defense of this Christian nation. From the many sides we are attacked, there remains but one side in this test of human rights and decency. Thank God for men on this side.

Pioneer, La.

To the Editor:

Mr. J. Travis Gilbert wants you to give both sides in your editorials. I would like to thank you for giving us the right side. There are two sides where the Kennedys are concerned, their side, and the right side. You stand very tall in my part of the woods as well as one or two of that ruffled flock of southern congressmen.

Replies To Gilbert

Rayville, La.

To the Editor:

In answer to or as concerning the letter in July 21 Morning World signed by J. Travis Gilbert, who admitted being a new comer to our area.

We do not deny him the privilege of saying his piece but we do think he should take a more sober look at the situation.

When looking at the real truth of the situation, it is hardly needful to say that anyone standing forthright on the truth today is always called by the so - called modernist (those who disregard truth) as bigots. (John 8:44. "Ye are of your father, the devil, and the lust of your father will ye do.)

Concerning respect for the president and his office, who can respect any such deeds as are performed by the one who now occupies that office? Where respect is deserved it will be forthcoming.

The same goes for the judiciary branch. (Jude 4 "For there are certain men who crept in unaware who were of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness and denying the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ.")

So let us ask this J. Travis Gilbert to take a more sober look at the truth and see if your editorials are not true after all.

Tension Headaches

Man Gets Rid Of Them By Dropping Unreasonable Customer

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I did a little detective work and I found the cause for my headaches. Four months ago I never knew what a headache was. Then I took on a new selling job. I would be free from headaches all week until Friday. Then I would get a whopper about the same time every Friday night.

First I looked into my diet but couldn't find anything different there. I wondered if I worked harder on Fridays. In fact, I saw fewer customers on that day. Then it suddenly came to me: it wasn't MORE customers but the kind of customers that counted. At last I realized that it was a stubborn, unreasoning, unlikable cuss that used to get my goat every time I saw him — which was on Fridays. Whenever I left him I felt "burned up" and resentful.

The feeling gradually wore off, I thought, by the time I got home. Later that night I was sure to get a whopper of a headache. I don't have them any more. And the reason is simple. I told the boss about it and he agreed that I don't have to see this fellow any more. I swapped customers with another salesman who isn't bothered by anything or anyone. Does this story make sense? —Mr. H.

COMMENT: IT CERTAINLY does. You were suffering from tension headaches. Resentment is often a factor. You were fortunate and wise to find the cause rather than have to keep filling up with aspirins.

Readers who are interested in the management of headaches are invited to write for my leaflet on the subject: "Hints on How to Overcome Headaches." Write to me in care of this newspaper, enclosing 10 cents and a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I have high blood pressure for which I am being treated and have it under control. During some recent laboratory tests it was discovered that I have a high uric acid reading. My doctor says that a 7.5 milligram reading is indicative of the disease. Yet I've never had any joint trouble or attacks of gout. How do you account for this? — Mr. G.

Comment: Not everyone with a high reading has had attacks. You say you are being treated for high blood pressure. Are you taking the thiazide diuretics (to remove excess fluid from the tissues)? When this medicine is used it sometimes produces hyper-uricemia (high uric acid concentration in the blood). Sometimes it causes gouty attacks, at other times only the increased concentration.

You may or may not get actual attacks of gout later on. Meanwhile, I suggest that you have routine checks on your blood uric acid (about once a year). There's nothing else to do about it now. No special diets, no anti-gout drugs or the like. In fact, it's possible that future readings may be entirely normal.

DEAR DR. STEINCROHN: I have had a chronic skin rash over my nose and cheeks for the past few months. I've been told that it is a "butterfly" rash. Should I see a medical specialist for it in addition to the skin doctor? — Mrs. T.

Comment: Better check with an internist to rule out the possibility of lupus erythematosus, which can also be a constitutional disease affecting other parts of the body.

Dr. Steincrohn's leaflet, "How To Manage Arthritis," will be mailed to you on receipt of a stamped, self - addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin for handling. Address your request to Dr. Steincrohn, in care of this newspaper.

Test Ban—Bottled Genie?

IN AN ATTEMPT to keep the "Genie in the bottle" the United States, Britain and Russia initialled a treaty banning nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere, outer space and under water at week's end. The signing came after 10 consecutive days of talks among America's W. Averell Harriman, Britain's Science Minister Lord Hailsham and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Until the moment of initialling the treaty, little was visible to the naked eye during the talks. Now, a curiously glaring loophole seems apparent — no provision for underground tests, the most difficult of the four types of tests to detect unless the United States has developed a more foolproof underground detection device than has been made public.

A. W. Harriman

Before it becomes effective the test ban treaty must be ratified by legislative bodies of all three countries. In the United States, a two-thirds vote in the Senate is necessary to ratify all treaties.

Following a briefing by Secretary of State Dean Rusk who gave two Senate committees a look at a tentative draft of the treaty a day before the initialling, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. declared he could not vote for the treaty as he'd seen it in the rough draft. Sen. Goldwater pointed out the draft treaty would halt U. S. testing in fields where the United States needs them and would permit Russia to pursue tests it needs underground. He said the treaty would disallow U. S. tests needed to match Russia's larger - yield nuclear warheads and to develop anti-missile missiles. On the other hand, he said, Russia could continue underground tests to develop tactical nuclear weapons of much smaller powers.

The Arizona senator said he could not see why the administration had "mysteriously" abandoned its efforts in seeking an overall test ban, including underground blasts.

Sen. Goldwater

Russia and the United States have always been at loggerheads concerning underground tests which involve the principle of personally - conducted "on-site" inspections. Much emphasis was placed upon the treaty as a "first-step" toward easing East-West cold war tensions. The Big Three ministers appeared hopeful the treaty would open doors for other talks to resolve East-West issues, such as Berlin.

The treaty's preamble described the loose-knit agreement as a possible means of ending the arms race. But, despite ambitious designs for the treaty, China said it would not be party to any test ban accord. President Charles de Gaulle said France will push ahead with plans for future testing.

Perhaps the "Genie" has already irretrievably floated from the bottle. Perhaps the treaty is similar to locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen. But, beginnings and first steps are always the most difficult. Let's hope it won't be the last.

MEANWHILE IN THE WAKE of the test ban parley, Britain, the United States and Russia expect to explore the German question again, possibly at a Geneva summit. The key problem is two Germanies — East and West. The Allies so far have stood firm for German unification, resisting all Soviet advances for recognition of East Germany in any form. Now, however, some sections of the British government are rumored to favor continued splitting of East and West Germany because they fear the force and unforeseeable future political leanings of a United Germany.

Railroad Dispute

A NATIONWIDE STRIKE aganist the railroads was averted when Daniel P. Loomis, president of the American Association of Railroads, told the House Commerce Committee, the railroads would agree to putting off imposing work rules until Aug. 29. The delay is expected to enable the President to refer the rail work rules dispute to the Inter-State Commerce Commission through legislation by Congress.

LOOMIS

At stake are jobs of about 10,000 firemen who could be jobless at once, and many thousands more who would be adversely affected in coming years. The railroad companies insist the new rules are needed to cut costs, adjust the railroad industry to automation, and eliminate "featherbedding." The rules are the outcome of a number of years of study in putting railroads on a more profitable basis.

However, if the work-rules are enforced, the five on-train unions are expected to walk off, trains would stop running, 600,000 other rail workers would be left idle, and the economy would face a growing paralysis.

With additional time, President Kennedy will attempt, under sanction of Congress, to give the Interstate Commerce Commission unprecedented authority to deal with the dispute. Sen. Barry Goldwater told the Senate he regards the proposal as the equivalent of compulsory arbitration and reiterated his opposition to the method of settling labor disputes. A union spokesman said the brotherhoods regard the ICC as "traditionally a management-favoring agency."

If the dispute is placed under ICC, the commission could delay a walkout at least two years. The main role of the commission would be deciding upon the amount of time in which jobs were terminated.

Under ICC jurisdiction work rules changes would go to the commission for approval, disapproval or modification. The ICC would require fair and equitable arrangement to such things as job seniority, displacement allowances, severance allowances and retraining allowances. An interim rule would be put into effect until both parties agree applications for proceedings. No work rules changes would be made except by agreement. If a strike or lockout to prevent a change would be made, it would be subject to action under the Interstate Commerce Act.

ONE OF THE MAJOR seeds which bloomed into the present railroad dispute has been automation. President Kennedy intends to appoint a commission to study automation's effects upon unemployment. Other studies have drawn many businessmen's fire, claiming they made a bogeyman out of automation. This time Kennedy emphasized he considers automation desirable, that he does not consider it frighteningly new, that it is merely one factor in unemployment.

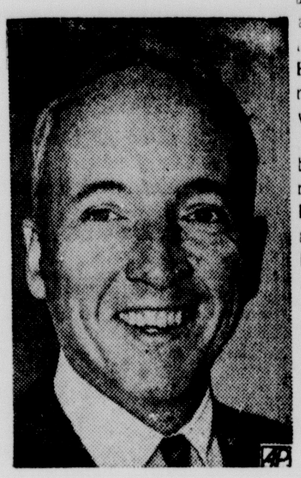
A few plans are already being worked out to compensate and alleviate the state of workers displaced by more efficient automation. One plan financed by savings through automation involves long-range sharing plans. Employers are encouraged to automate, both to ease strain on human backs and to enrich funds from which workers draw benefits. Another plan is spreading work by giving long-term employes 3-month vacations every five years or so. A third development is the .700 batting average by new federal retraining programs in getting graduates back to work.

However, in private industry only one long-range sharing plan has been in full operation for more than a year. There also is disagreement over costs and effectiveness of the programs.

Buddhists, Diem

PRESIDENT Ngo Dinh Diem of South Viet Nam was asked to step down by Buddhists as the religious dispute deepened. The Buddhists said they had planned new strategies to fight the Roman Catholic president. They predicted new hunger strikes and demonstrations as well as public suicides to back their demands.

THE THIRD MEMBER of President Kennedy's original cabinet resigned last week to enter private life. Postmaster General J. Edward Day quit to join a Washington law firm. It is expected that a former Kennedy roommate, Benjamin Smith of Massachusetts, will get the vacancy.



J. EDWARD DAY

Previous cabinet resignations during the Kennedy administration include Sec. of Labor Arthur Goldberg who accepted an appointment to the U. S. Supreme Court and Abraham Ribicoff who is now U.S. Senator from Connecticut.

Smith, who was appointed to the Senate to fill the unexpired term of President Kennedy after his election to the White House, refused to run against the President's brother Teddy in the Democratic primary and the younger Kennedy was subsequently elected to the Senate. Could this be a reward of sorts for loyalty to the Clan?

New Tactics For Castro

Cuba's dictator Castro has made a bold new move in his bid for dominance in Latin America. He has flouted himself before constituted authority in Venezuela and his "partisans" there have aided in the escape from prison of leftist guerrillas — along with common convicts. Five persons were reported killed and 51 others wounded when 86 prisoners were "crashed" out of a Caracas prison Thursday. After internal rioting at the prison, inmates dashed for the gates. They were given covering fire and support from outside by the pro-Communist Armed Forces of National Liberation which has waged a terrorist campaign for many months in an effort to topple the government of one-time Communist Romulo Betancourt.

THE HOUSE FOREIGN Affairs Committee last week did an unusual and unprecedented thing in a foreign aid bill move. The President was given authority to extend aid to Indonesia — but only if he formally declares that such help is vital to U.S. interests. This might be a blow to Red-leaning Sukarno who has just been given a life's lease on the leadership of the island nation. It might take some of the needed funds for destroying Borneo.

Lighter Vein

WOMEN ARE EXPECTED to remain much the same as last year's models. The House of Christian Dior's designer, Marc Bohan, promised no radical changes in fall-winter fashions. Dresses are still expected to reveal a goodly portion of the female leg, but knee-high boots will be fashionable. At least the cavalry look will be better than appearing as balloons or sacks.

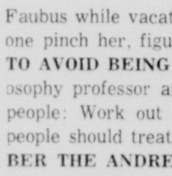
CHAMPION OF THE WATERMELON seed spitters, Wally Ausley of Raleigh, N. C., spat a seed 35½ feet breaking a Raleigh watermelon festival record set by John Alexander who once spat a seed 34 feet. Alexander's best against Ausley was only 29 feet. FLORIDA'S LUXURY HOTELS are getting a run-down appearance around the front doors. Wealthy women guests accidentally scratch the glass entrance doors near the handles with their diamond rings. MISS UNIVERSE, Ieda Maria Vargas of Brazil, was personally congratulated by Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus while vacationing at Miami Beach. She asked that someone pinch her, figuratively that is, to see if she were dreaming. TO AVOID BEING MISERABLE, Dr. Charles G. Werner, a philosophy professor at University of Miami, told a group of young people: Work out a balance between the way a person thinks people should treat him and the way they actually do. REMEMBER THE ANDREA DORIA, a luxury liner which collided with the Swedish liner Stockholm back in the summer of 1956 and went to the ocean floor 25 miles northeast of Nantucket? Jim Taylor, 29-year-old deep sea diver, said, "I'm going to bring it back up." If he does, it will be worth an estimated $6 million.

Governor's Conference

GOV. NELSON ROCKEFELLER'S attempt to use the governor's conference as a pad for launching a political comeback as GOP presidential nominee apparently fizzled. Rockefeller picked up most of the publicity on the civil rights issue, which seems to offer him his best opportunity to return to the front, but not without picking up some verbal briars from Endicott Peabody and Louisiana's Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, who said, some delegates were trying to use the conference as a spring board for future political ambitions. Rockefeller's next move is to visit 10 states in a series of public appearances in nearly every section of the country. First on the list is California.

During the conference Gov. Edmund G (Pat) Brown of California and Gov. Carl E. Sanders of Georgia labelled Goldwater as segregationist. But Gov. Rockefeller and Gov. George Wallace of Alabama were unsure of Goldwater's position. Goldwater has contended he is not a racist. He once said that he did not believe any civil rights legislation was needed but subsequently said he could support part of President Kennedy's program. Sounds like a states-righter.

Things Profumo



Christine Keeler

IN THE TART case of British playgirls, Dr. Stephen Ward accused of keeping a stable of pretty girls for hire and living off their income, pleaded innocent to five charges connected with prostitution. As the trial got underway, he sat in the dock sketching, while Christine testified.

Racial Problems

ALTHOUGH THE RACIAL PROBLEM seemed to be taking a breather, trouble continued in both the North and South. In New York, police grew tense and weary after bodily hauling 250 demonstrators away to paddy wagons at a Brooklyn hospital site. More than 1,000 demonstrators in relays cast themselves in front of trucks. In Washington, D. C., Negro leader, Roy Wilkins said he could give no guarantee of non-violence in a mammoth civil rights demonstration planned there Aug. 28. Cambridge, Md. arrived at a shaky truce between whites and Negroes. Reports that a house on Chicago's south side had been sold to a Negro family brought out nearly 100 persons who jeered police guarding the home. Police fired a smoke bomb and firemen sprayed high-pressure water hoses to break up a racial demonstration at Somerville, Tenn.

THE PRESIDENT OF the Shreveport unit of NAACP was arrested in connection with Negro sit-ins there. The arrest brings to 17 the number jailed. In Baton Rouge, city officials and Negro leaders warned Negroes against further violence in anti-segregation moves after a disturbance broke out in an attempt to integrate a swimming pool.

Leh's Peace Is Invaded In Wartime

Ancient Indian Fastness Finds Turbulent Times

Four-engine transport planes bank steeply around a hilltop monastery to land on a steel airstrip 11,500 feet high in the Western Himalayas. The planes disgorge tractors, cement and road rollers to build a permanent landing strip that is to be ready by October.

Other machines, including rotary snowplows, are on the way to India from the United States to keep open, through most of the winter, the 500-mile truck route to the Kashmir valley and the railhead at Pathankot in the Punjab.

Airdropping of foodstuffs for the Indian army goes on north and east of Leh.

In headquarters at Leh, staff officers pore over reports from patrols on the 15,000- to 19,000-foot ridges and try to guess what the Chinese Communists are doing on their side of the cease-fire line.

Thus, seven months after Peking's claims on eastern Ladakh were enforced by the Chinese Red Army, the Indian army and air force, with U.S. help, are transforming sleepy Leh valley into a major military base.

The buildup is designed to forestall another Chinese Communist advance into Indian territory. Indian commanders also would like eventually to try to get some of the captured territory back.

The town of Leh, population 3,000, still wears the outward look it had for centuries as a trading post on the trans-Himalayan caravan route. The trade has been halted by Chinese-Indian hostilities.

Separated from India by the snow-capped Zaskar range of the Himalayas, Leh used to be a middle-point on the camel trail to Tibet and Sinkiang. A sign put up by the Indian army points out that it is 748 miles by road to Delhi, 600 to the Soviet Union and 100 to Tibet. Tibet is closer also in altitude, climate, people and religion.

Leh gets less than four inches of precipitation a year. The valley is four feet deep in fine powdered loess—soil lifted off lands elsewhere in Asia and blown here by winds through the centuries.

Where the water of the young Indus river can be coaxed into irrigation ditches, the valley bursts into green wheat and barley fields in summertime. These end half a mile from the river bank.

The Mongol-eyed people, often fair under a layer of sunburn and dirt, practice polyandry and send younger sons into monasteries to reduce the pressure of population.

Like their distant cousins the Tibetans, they are cheerful people and devout Buddhists. They owe spiritual allegiance to the Dalai Lama, who lives in the Punjab.

The neat prayer-walls at Leh, composed of scripture-bearing stones that are supposed to confer benediction on the passerby, and the new-looking Spituk Monastery testify to the vitality of the faith.

Leh has yet to recover, however, from the loss of trade with Tibet. The state goverment of Jammu and Kashmir has started a weaving establishment and plans other industries. It has helped the people raise Tibetan goats to furnish Pashmina underwool for fine Kashmir shawls. Education is spreading with Indian government assistance.

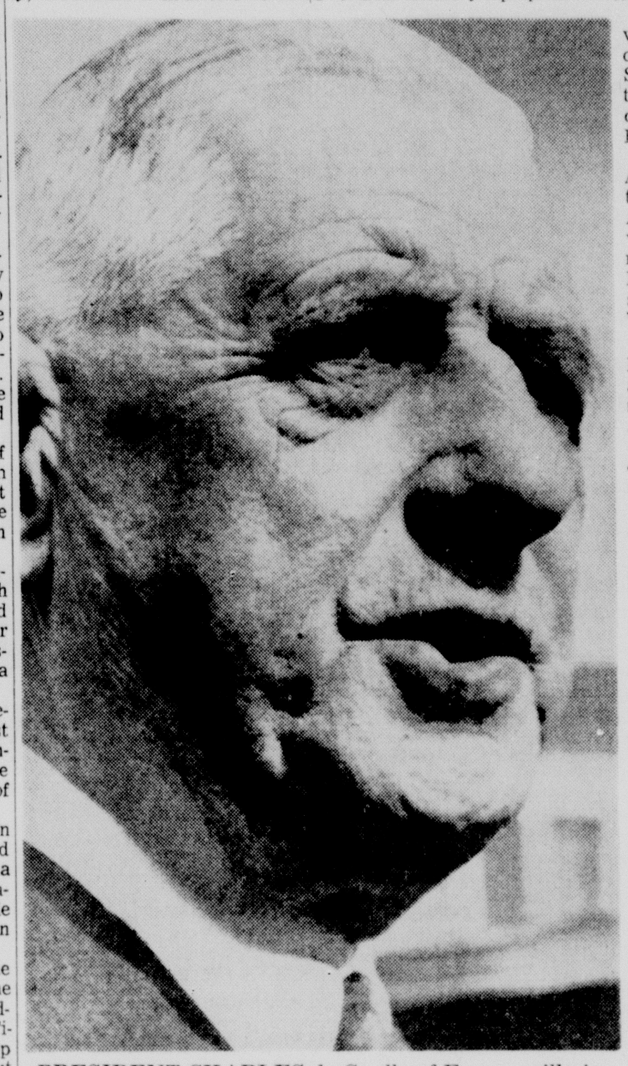
The pressure of troops nearby does not seem to have changed the town. Soldiers get little or no leave. Crews flying from New Delhi seldom leave the airstrip.

De Gaulle Schedules News Conference; A Rare Event

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle, who has been on the sidelines while the big three nuclear powers talked in Moscow, takes the spotlight in the coming week in one of his rare news conferences.

He may make a major policy statement, but what this might be, only De Gaulle knows. Usually, even Cabinet ministers do not know. On one occasion five irate ministers resigned in protest against what the president had said on European policy.

De Gaulle has scheduled a news conference for Monday. His last one, on Jan. 14, jarred the Western world with a veto on British membership in the Common Market, and curt rejection of President Kennedy's proposals for an integrated nuclear force for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.



PRESIDENT CHARLES de Gaulle of France will give a news conference Monday, his first in six months. He may make a major policy statement but what this would be only de Gaulle himself knows. (AP Wirephoto)

De Gaulle may use the conference as a platform to reply to Kennedy's actions since then — particularly to Kennedy's speeches in Germany, pledging enduring American support to a truly "cohesive" Europe within an Atlantic partnership.

Other events since last January which may call forth comment include the open split between the Soviet Union and Red China, and the partial nuclear test ban accord among the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union.

Kennedy, in his speech at American University in Washington, called for a new look at America's attitude toward the Soviet Union and the cold war. Premier Khrushchev, in speeches in East Berlin and Moscow, has seemed to offer an easing in East-West tension.

De Gaulle, touchy as ever on France's place in the world, has asserted consistently that France must have its own nuclear arsenal as long as any other country has one, and must participate on equal terms in any high level global decisions.

The President has long predicted a rift between the Soviet Union and Red China which could lead to a settlement in Europe "from the Atlantic to the Urals" as Moscow sought to secure its rear in an inevitable tussle with Peking.

France has warned that Paris will not be bound by any nuclear test ban achieved by the "Anglo-Saxons" and the Soviets. De Gaulle has declared that France must continue to develop its own nuclear arm unless all nuclear powers agree to scrap their own arsenals and delivery systems as a first step to complete and controlled disarmament.

At De Gaulle news conferences, there is no give and take of question and answer. They are more like a long, rambling speech to a hall full of newsmen, photographers, civil servants and hangers-on, with the cabinet sitting to one side as specators.

The president will, it is true, call for questions. But these must be put all at once, and some key questions are planted in advance with compliant French newsmen. Only rarely can an unscheduled or embarrassing question get on the agenda, and if it does the president is likely to ignore it.

When all the questions are in, De Gaulle begins to reply, talking more than half an hour. If a question he wants to answer somehow fails to get asked, De Gaulle usually gives an answer anyway.

Since returning to power in 1958, De Gaulle has given, on the average, one news conference each spring and another each fall.

In October 1958, when De Gaulle was still only premier, he suggested possible negotiations with the Algerian rebels for a cease-fire.

In November he announced that Khrushchev would be making an official visit to France. De Gaulle also spelled out his cautiously distant conditions for attending a Big Four summit meeting.

He also urged direct election of future French presidents. In September of the same year, De Gaulle told a news conference the West must stand firm in Berlin.

In May of 1962, De Gaulle jolted five pro-European members of his cabinet, including a former premier, Pierre Pflimlin, with scornfully sarcastic remarks against European federation. The next day Pflimlin and the other four ministers resigned.

Peace Is Deceiving On Island Of Cyprus

By HAL McCLURE

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—Slumbering peacefully under summer's blazing sun, this island republic appears to be just another tourist stopover in the Eastern Mediterranean.

But this is only a mask hiding festering that could erupt into bloody fighting between the island's squabbling Greek and Turkish communities.

"We hope for the best but fear the worst unless this issue is resolved," was the way one Cypriot put it.

The trouble was sparked nearly seven months ago when the Greek-dominated council of ministers failed to agree on how the island's five largest towns should be governed. The Turks favor separate Greek and Turkish councils for each of the towns — as provided under the constitution. But the Greeks claim this is unrealistic and costly. They want mixed Greek-Turkish boards to administer municipal affairs.

"The Greeks seem to have logic on their side," said one Western diplomat. "But the Turks have the law."

The island's highest court has failed to find a solution and tension between the two communities is increasing. Isolated violence has broken out, but cool heads on both sides have prevented it from spreading.

NO STRANGER

Terror is no stranger to Cyprus. The islanders — estimated now to number about 580,000, of whom 80 per cent are Greek—in 1960 threw off British colonial rule that had lasted 82 years. But it took four long years of bloodshed which claimed 600 lives.

At the end, Greek and Turk were battling each other. The Greek Cypriot battle cry of "enosis"—union with Greece—embittered the island Turks, who still claim the Greeks want to join the ancestral homeland.

But enosis hopes were cooled, if not killed, when in 1959 Archbishop Makarios, now president of Cyprus, signed the London-Zurich agreements. Greece, Turkey and Britain also signed as interested parties.

The agreements ruled that Cyprus could never join another state. Minority rights of Turks were guaranteed, including seats on the council of ministers, the house of representatives and in the civil service. The separate Turk and Greek municipal administrations also were outlined.

Makarios, severely criticized by some of his own people for signing the accords, says he has no regrets and would do it again.

"I tried to get the agreements changed in London, but I failed," the bearded prelate-politician told an interviewer recently. "I knew we would have trouble carrying them out."

"The Turks get more than their share," said one Greek Cypriot. "Have you ever heard of a vice president being able to veto a president?"

Under the constitution the president, Greek, and the vice president, Turkish, have certain veto rights.

Makarios, in contrast to Turkish leaders here, is optimistic about Cyprus' future. He sees the island progressing economically along a three-pronged path: tourism, agriculture and light industry.

The toddling republic has received much foreign assistance, considering its size. The island has received nearly $80 million in grants, technical assistance and loans from friendly countries, the United Nations and other sources. The United States has offered more than $12 million in aid.

While Cyprus' main exports are minerals and agricultural products, the islanders still import more than they send out. The imbalance of trade amounted to about $24 million last year. They hope to manufacture more of their own goods to offset this.

Also propping the Cypriot economy are the big British army and air force bases on the island. The cry once heard throughout the island, "Tommy, go home," is sounded no more.

If things look so rosy why the anxiety?

"We're a minority on the island," said Dr. Fazil Kuchuk, Turkish Cypriot vice president. "We are in danger. There could be a bloodbath."

Kuchuk, a former physician who still holds a free clinic once a week, claims Greeks boycott Turkish merchants and "harass us at every turn." He particularly wants separate Turkish and Greek city councils "to protect us —our rights."

He charged a strong Greek EOKA, National Organization of Cypriot Combatants, movement still exists on the island.

EAST GERMAN SHOW

Communist Hotel Near Completion

EISENHUETTENSTADT, East Germany (AP)—The Hotel Lunik on the Street of the Republic is nearly complete.

When it is finished, the standard tour for foreign visitors of this showcase of Communist East Germany probably will include an overnight stay.

The Communist regime is proud of this city, whose name means "City of the Iron Works." Its inhabitants are the employes of the country's largest raw iron producing plant and their families.

Three-quarters of Eisenhuettenstadt was constructed from scratch as the model of a Communist community. The remainder, the town of Fuerstenberg, population 8,000, was integrated into the new city, population 35,000.

"There is no private enterprise in the new town," an official said proudly. "Some traces of the capitalist system remain in the old section but they are disappearing."

This Communist dream city looks much like housing developments one finds in Western Europe, with square apartment buildings in symetrical patterns, broken here and there by a shopping center or an administrative building The Hotel Lunik could pass for a hostelry in a West German town of comparable size.

Apartment blocs are divided into "complexes" of 5,000 inhabitants. Each has its own shopping area, recreation center, school and nursery.

They are used to visitors here. The first stop for foreign newspaper men is the city hall, where the city architect, Herbert Haertel, is ready to give a lecture in front of a scale model of the town.

INDUSTRIAL RUHR

"As you know, Germany's heavy industry is concentrated in the Ruhr in West Germany," he starts out. "Therefore, the third congress of the Socialist unity party communist decided to build an iron works and a city here to give the German Democratic Republic a basis for heavy industry.

"Our coke supply comes from Poland and our ore from the Soviet Union", he adds.

He explains the site was chosen because it is near the Polish border, because it is near the Oder and Spree Rivers for transportation and because it's close to the city of Frankfurt and the Oder, a ready source of manpower.

Plans call for a population of 55,000-60,000 by 1972, 11,000 directly employed by the iron works.

Rents, Haertel explains, average 10 per cent of the average worker's salary, which is about $125 per month.

Talk About Your Language Barrier

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP)—About 13,000 persons are retiring from government jobs in Ceylon rather than learn the Sinhalese language, official sources report.

Since the British granted independence to this island nation in 1948, its government has been conducted mainly in English. But under political pressure from the Sinhalese-speaking rural majority, plans were made to switch to Sinhalese.

A Journal of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, edited by Dwight B. Heath (Corinth Books - Citadel Press, $3.95): The earliest published account of the Plymouth Plantation, the first permanent white settlement in northeast North America, was a volume printed in 1622, known to historians as Mourt's Relation. Heath has reproduced this original journal, with notes and an introduction, as part of the American Experience Series. The story of the Pilgrims is a familiar one, but a reading of their story as told by members of the colony themselves adds a new dimension. Set down in the 17th century prose style we associate with the Bible are accounts of the settlers' arrival on Cape Cod, their troubles and triumphs in establishing their homes farther up the coast at Plymouth, and their quarrels and peace-making with the Indians.

One Day in the "New Life," by Fyodor Abramov, translated by David Floyd (Praeger, $3.50): The "New Life" is a Soviet collective farm. The narrator is the Communist-appointed chairman of the farm, Ananity Yegorovich Mysovsky. The day is an account of Mysovsky's impossible task of reconciling bureaucratic orders from higher Communist officials with the apathy and ingenious goldbricking of the peasants. He is told to neglect the hay harvest and concentrate on getting in the silage. It rains and the hay is ruined. Yet Mysovsky must at least make an attempt to fulfill his farm's plan. We follow him on his dreary round to the peasant households. All are sick, absent, drunk, unwilling. But all have expended much energy and enterprise on their private plots and homes. In the end, unable to balance party directives and pleasant foot-dragging, Mysovsky takes the side of the peasant. Much has been written in the West about the Soviet agricultural failures, but never has so candid a book come out of Russia.

The New Wilderness, by Willard E. Wilks, (McKay $4.50): The Moon: New World For Men, by Martin Caidin (Bobbs-Merrill $5.95): Space is very much in the headlines these days, and Wilks and Caidin have written useful guidebooks to the vast vacancy overhead for the general reader. "The New Wilderness" is a general exploration of the subject, summarizing the theories of Newton and Einstein and explaining why and how they are both in use. The author, a former UPI science writer in Los Angeles, touches on such detailed aspects of space exploration as its potentail military value and the prospects for interplantetary travel, It is an informative and crisply written introduction of new worlds and the space that separates them. Whereas Wilks is concerned with general problems, Caidin in "The Moon: New World for Men" is disturbingly specific. His concern is with the U.S. moon program and what he has to say is not encouraging. Caidin is a seasoned writer on air and space matters, with 25 titles to his credit. He has witnessed most major launchings from Cape Canaveral and he knows the people who are responsible — and their problems. His book is a penetrating survey of the prospects for a successful American space mission.

A High New House, by Thomas Williams (Dial $4.95): A collection of short stories by a young writer who writes naturally and gracefully and has something to say about the eternal conflict of good and evil and its resolution in men and women — if only for the moment. In the title story Bob and Alice, a young couple with apparent security, are reconstructing an old house into an attractive, quiet retreat with all modern conveniences. They "have it made" — almost — until the unreconstructed world intrudes in the form of a squalid family which establishes itself.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Variety Of New Books Available

By FRANCES FLANDERS

Each week new titles are added to the Library book collection and each week there is a variety of material added. Readers of western stories will want to read "The Dangerous Days of Kiowa Jones" written by Clifton Adams. This story is well - done and interesting.

"Grieve for the Past" by Stanton Forbes is the title of a new mystery story. Parents and teachers will want to see "Reading, Writing and Speech Problems in Children" written by Samuel Torrey Orton. This book not only defines the problems, but offers solutions.

Three interesting books in the field of religion are "The Harper's Bible Commentary" written by William Neil, "Family Living in the Bible" by Edith Deen and "Journeys After St. Paul." All of these books will be helpful to teacher's of Bible classes as well as the general reader. "Forge of Democracy" by Neil MacNeil is a very fine study of the House of Representatives and how it works. Copies of this book were purchased for each branch of the library and will be widely used. A valuable book for those approaching retirement age is "The Secret of Successful Retirement" written by Gereon Zimmerman. "The Extremists" by Mark Sherwin discusses many of the fringe political groups in American life.

Many people are concerned about their diet and especially about the problem of cholesterol. A new book on this subject, which should be widely used is "Eat, Drink and Lower Your Cholesterol" by Frederick T. Zugibe. Gardeners will be interested in a very useful and attractive book called "Grow Cacti" written by Cyril Marsden. It is well illustrated and contains much good information.

Students in the architectural field will be happy to know that the Library now has a new copy of "Technical Drawing" by Frederick Giesecke. Anyone planning a trip to Europe, should read "Turn Right at the Fountain" by George W. Oakes. This book outlines a series of walking tours in the major cities and towns of Europe. "In Quest of the Northwest Passage" is a very fine study of the many attempts which have been made to find this passage over the years. The author is Leslie Neatby.

Are you planning a camping trip this summer? If so, you will want to see "The Camping Family's Guide to Campsites," put out by the C. S. Hammond Company, who also published a fascinating travel atlas of America. Although Atlasses are usually assigned to the reference collection, this one was placed in the circulating collection, because we felt that people would enjoy taking it on trips with them.

Another book of religious importance in "Daily Life in the Time of Jesus" written by Henri Daniel-Rops. "The Ordeal of Power" by Emmett John Hughes is a political memoir of the Eisenhower years and sheds much light on the history of our country from 1953 to 1961. Several new biographies are worthy of interest.

"The Day They Shook the Plum Tree" by Arthur Lewis is the story of the spectacular career of Hetty Green, once known as the world's richest woman. James Horan has written a very fine study of the career of Mathew Brady, whom he calls the historian with a camera. People are always interested in biographies of lawyers. The latest one of that type is "Courtroom Warrior" by Richard O'Connor, which is a detailed study of the life of William Travers Jerome. The autobiographical accounts written by Ralph Moody are always popular. The latest one is "The Dry Divide" and will find many ready readers. Two new atlasses are available. One is "Hammond's Ambassador World Atlas" and the other is "The National Geographic Atlas of the World."

No matter what your reading needs, the Ouachita Parish Public Library is eager to supply them for you.

War Prisoners Of Japanese Kept Resisting

YANKS DON'T CRY. By Martin Boyle. Bernard Geis. $4.95.

For 44 months Boyle was a prisoner of war in Japan. His book is a detailed chronicle of the long fight to stay alive.

He was a Marine stationed on Guam at the time of Pearl Harbor, and was taken prisoner when the Japanese overran that island. He was in several camps during the war, most of the time at the port city of Osaka.

Back of the book's title is the author's thesis that even when the situation was the blackest in the final year of the conflict, none of the Marines, the other Americans or Allied personnel ceased to resist their captors. He has recorded only one case of a turncoat, who was somewhat of a mental case.

There were beatings and brutality from such characters as the mean Dr. Matsui and a man they called Sadie the Sadist. But the prinsoners chief concern was to scrounge enough food for survival.

As long as they were at Osaka, unloading freighters, the prisoners had a good many opportunities to steal edibles, and they became expert smugglers. They even managed to do a little sabotage.

Boyle also records the changes in morale that came when the famous Doolittle raid was made, and later when the B29s began blasting at the Japanese homeland.

He gives only brief indications of how the Japanese civilians reacted, but they are enlightening. His description of the weird chaos that followed the Japanese surrender is both vivid and hilarious.

Judge Questions Intelligence Of Rights Advocate

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI)—U. S. District Judge Harold Cox became exasperated with a Negro civil rights attorney Saturday and asked questions about his intelligence.

The attorney, R. Jess Brown 50, of Jackson was testifying on a charge that he used a woman's name in a school integration suit without her permission. If found guilty, he could be disbarred.

Apparently confused over certain times and places, Brown gave some conflicting testimony under questioning by attorney Arnold Pyle, who was appointed by Cox to prosecute the case.

"This witness is being less than frank with this court and I'm not happy about it one bit," Cox commented at one point.

"I'm not going to sit here all day and listen to you change your testimony," he told Brown. "You've just gotten into this thing over your head."

"Are you excited, or ignorant, or what?" the judge asked. "I can't make up my mind about you." Brown said he was doing his best to give an accurate account of developments in the suit to desegregate schools in Leake County.

Later Brown, who appeared in a dark checked sport coat and a blue and green striped tie, rose from the witness chair in a shouting, arm-waving defense of his actions and was ordered by Cox to sit down.

Brown said Mrs. Ruthie Nell McBeth was listed as one of 13 Negro plaintiffs on the strength of a retainer she signed authorizing him to file the suit on her behalf.

Mrs. McBeth testified in an earlier hearing that she signed the retainer after being told by another woman it was merely a petition to re-open a school which had been closed under a statewide consolidation program.

U.S. Rejects Charges Made By Castro

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States Saturday rejected "as completely without foundation" Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's charge that he was "swindled" out of $10 million worth of supplies in the ransom deal for the Bay of Pigs prisoners.

The State Department said Canadian and U.S. banks, which issued a letter of credit guaranteeing delivery of $53 million in medical supplies and other goods, reported some time ago that the American Red Cross had fully met that commitment.

"Castro should check his facts more carefully," the department said in a statement which was read to newsmen by press officer Richard I. Phillips.

It said that July 3, when the Red Cross announced completion of delivery, "the Cuban Red Cross had thanked the American Red Cross for the fine way it had completed its mission."

That statement was made, according to officials, by the head of the Cuban Red Cross.

The ransom deal, under which 1,113 prisoners of the ill - fated April 1961 invasion attempt were released and brought to the United States, was approved by the U.S. government but it was not an official undertaking. It was carried out by the Red Cross working with the cooperation and assistance of a number of American officials, including Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy and U.S. business leaders.

Castro, in a fire-eating speech Friday on the tenth anniversary of the beginning of his revolutionary movement, asserted that the U.S. government had prevented the Red Cross and attorney James B. Donovan of New York, who negotiated the prisoner release, "from fulfilling the agreement with us 100 per cent."

Writer Makes Plea For Militant View

The whole theme of Joyce's book is summed up tersely in his opening sentence.

"While we have mustered our defenses for the eventuality of a hot war, we may be in dire danger of losing the ideological struggle for the minds of men."

One of the author's basic points, hammered home with vigor, is that Americans are too touchy about the term "propaganda," as though it were a dirty word. He argues that propaganda is a thoroughly legitimate and important function of the cold war, and that the uninhibited Russians are much better at it than the Americans.

In Joyce's view, America has hampered itself by sticking to a watered - down, wishy - washy program of "information," on the premise that if people in other nations know us, they will love us. He finds this attitude especially prevalent in Congress and the State Department, and scoffs heartily at it.

He also marshals statistics to show that even on the quantitative side the United States Information Agency, hampered by small budgets,, is able to get into other countries only a fraction of the radio broadcasts and books that are disseminated by the Russians. He quotes expert witnesses to the effect that our "information" program has been a governmental stepchild, plagued by a lack of coordinated objectives.

He concludes by proposing some remedies. Chiefly they would be a sharp elevation of the USIA's status, power and funds, and the establishment of a Freedom Academy to train cold war fighters just as we train military leaders.

Joyce is no tyro in the field of mass communications and persuasion. A senior editor of the trade publication "Printers, Ink," he has based his book on a study originally covered in that magazine.

Life Of Pope Warm Account Of Good Will

A MAN NAMED JOHN, The Life of Pope John XXIII. By Alden Hatch. Hawthorn. $4.95.

Somehow in his short reign Pope John came to be known to the public in many lands, regardless of their religious faith, as a kindly unassuming man of good will.

Hatch has conveyed in this biography some of the reasons for that feeling. Partly it was the Pope's lowly origin, of peasant stock from the little Italian village of Sotto il Monte (Under the Mountain); his belief in the idea of the "happy priest;" his sincere dislike for pomp, and his often gently witty reactions.

But of course personality traits alone could not have won for Angelo Roncalli the high place in the Roman Catholic Church which led to his election as Pope. Hatch shows how his long, intelligent and tireless service to the Vatican, mainly as a diplomat, led to his elevation. There were difficult assignments in Bulgaria, Turkey, Greece and France before Cardinal Roncalli became Patriarch of Venice.

Hatch also shows how the Second Vatican Council (Ecumenical) and the encyclical "Pacem in Terris" were the high marks of John's reign. It is interesting that John favored Cardinal Montini as his successor and that the new Pope will continue the Council which John had summoned.

The manuscript for this book, in preparation for several years, was completed shortly before Pope John's death, and there was just time as the book went to press to insert a final brief chapter on that event.

It is an admiringly biography, not complete enough to be definitive, but interesting for the lay reader.

Wires Favoring JFK's Position

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—The White House said Saturday that telegrams on President Kennedy's speech on the Moscow nuclear test ban agreement were running about 40-1 in favor of the President's position.

It said Kennedy had received hundreds of telegrams on the Friday night speech, in which he described the agreement as a victory for mankind.

Press Secretary Pierre Salinger gave newsmen no specific figures on the number of telegrams received, other than to say they ran into the "high hundreds."

SWEDEN LAUNCHES ROCKET

The test which was aimed to measure temperatures and winds at an altitude between 45 and 95 kilometers (27.9-58.9 miles) was successful, a spokesman for the rocket program said. Sweden plans to launch three more rockets during the summer.

Convict Slugs Guard, Escapes

DEQUINCY, La. (AP) — Calcasieu Parish officers said a state prison convict escaped Saturday apparently after slugging his guard.

The guard, C. R. Dixon, was hospitalized here Saturday noon but his condition was not believed to be serious. He had been hit on the head with a hammer.

Calcasieu Parish officers said that for some reason that was not clear the guard had taken the prisoner by car from Angola and was bringing him to see the convict's mother, who lives near DeQuincy.

Italian Riviera Feels Effects Of 2nd Quake

IMPERIA, Italy (UPI) — Chimneys toppled, residents and tourists fled to the beaches in nightgowns or pajamas and a number of persons fainted when the second earthquake in eight days shook the Italian Riviera early Saturday.

The quake, which was also felt in the hills of Piedmont and on the French Riviera, followed a stronger shock in the same area July 19 and Friday's catastrophe in Skopje, Yugoslavia.

Persons in Imperia, Albenga, Bordighera and some other resorts panicked. In other places, such as San Remo or Savona, the shock was so light that many people failed to notice it.

The shock was estimated at grade three on the Mercalli Scale.

Despite its own earthquake, Italy was busy helping the victims of the Yugoslav disaster..

In France, the shocks were felt in such holiday resorts as Monte Carlo, Menton, Nice, Cannes, St. Tropez and in Marseilles and Corsica. Many persons rushed out into the streets.

The first shock Saturday was accompanied by a tidal wave in the Mediterranean which spent itself long before it could reach shore.

American Nazi Cuffed To Door

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A member of the American Nazi Party handcuffed himself to the door of the German Embassy here Saturday and threw away the key in protest against what he called "the continued imprisonment of Nazis by the Bonn government."

Police were forced to cut the man loose and charged him with demonstrating within 500 feet of an embassy. The man was identified as 61-year-old Frank Niles, Arlington, Va.

Niles handcuffed himself to the door while district police were watching a group of 10 American Nazis who were picketing a block away from the embassy.

District law forbids picketing within 500 feet of any embassy.

TRIBESMAN KILL FIVE

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) —Gelubba tribesmen from Ethiopia killed four men and one woman of the Kanyan Gabbra tribe and stole 1,200 head of sheep and goats from two frontier villages, police said Saturday.

The raiders, numbering 15 to 20, also shot dead three camels in their raid Wednesday. Police said other Gelubba war parties have been over the border during the week.

Bolivian Tin Mines Ordered To Yield Power

LA PAX, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivia's tin mine unions faced Saturday a government ultimatum to relinquish some of their power, rid themselves of Communist leadership and cut out alleged featherbedding by Aug. 1. The result could be violence and bloodshed in a nationwide protest strike of 20,000 miners.

Bankrupt and living on aid from the United States, the Bolivian government is reported ready to use troops and declare a modified form of martial law if necessary.

Since the mines were nationalized 11 years ago, they have lost money. It costs the government $2 to produce a pound of tin selling for $1.10 to $1.17 on the world market. The mines are said to be losing $1 million a month.

The ultimatum was issued by the state-run Bolivian Mining Corp., called Comibol, with the full backing of President Victor Pas Estenssoro after negotiations with labor leaders ended in deadlock.

Union leaders have announced they will hold a three-day emergency meeting starting Monday in Oruro, about 130 miles southeast of here, to decide what to do about the government ultimatum.

Comibol warned it would close down indefinitely its big Catavi complex, employing 6,500 miners, if the union rejected its proposal to streamline mining operations.

A SPECIAL PARENTS' day program was observed Friday by the Twin Cities YMCA-YWCA when more than 250 parents, campers and friends attended special ceremonies at Forsythe Park. Doctor Is Guilty In Abortion Case

Dr. Abarbanel was indicted by the Los Angeles County grand jury on a charge he performed an abortion on Diane Mitchell, 22, in his office last Sept. 28. Mrs. Mitchell was identified at the trial as a divorcee.

The jury, which began its deliberations Friday acquitted a codefendant before the jurors retired Friday night. He was Ralph Edlin, 27, of West Los Angeles. He had been accused of taking the woman to Dr. Abarbanel's office.

Judge Orlando H. Rhodes said he would sentence Dr. Abarbanel Aug. 19.

Widow Leaves Postman Cash

KINGSPORT, Tenn. (UPI) — An elderly widow who considered her mailman one of the family died recently and left the postman $10,200, it was disclosed Saturday.

Mrs. Sarah Walker of Kingsport left the largest portion of her estate to postman Earl Goins. The rest was divided between local charities.

"I knew Mrs. Walker had always considered me one of the family, but I never expected anything like this," Goins said.

Young GOP, Committee Are At Odds

NASHVILLE (UPI) — Tennessee's young Republicans have been at odds with the GOP executive committee on a number of issues but apparently are in solid agreement on the man to carry the party banner in next year's presidential election.

The seemingly unanimous choice, so leaders of the two groups say, is Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

The name of New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller was conspicuously missing when the state's three Republican congressmen ticked off lists of presidential prospects at a recent meeting of the executive committee.

Applause for Goldwater

Mention of Goldwater brought loud and long applause.

The state GOP has set a goal of a 100,000 plurality in the presidential race and the president of the state's Young Republican Clubs says Goldwater would get more votes than any other candidate.

YRC Chief John Haselton of Nashville says the two primary goals of the party nationally are to break open the so-called "Solid South" and organize the big cities.

"I think most people are attracted to Barry Goldwater and then to the Republican party rather than vice versa," says Haselton. "He is a man who stands on his convictions. That is what the people like."

Haselton said that Goldwater's record shows that he does not vote for what is politically expedient and that "the people are tired of politicians running the government."

Civil Rights Stand

"Goldwater was for civil rights before the Kennedys knew what the word meant. He integrated the Arizona National Guard in 1946 although it was not politically expedient to do so.

"All the Johnny-come-lately politicians are hopping on civil rights. There are personal rights but there are property rights, too. Help the Negroes, yes. But not to the detriment of everyone else."

He said the GOP's job in the South is to convince southern Democrats they are members of a party which no longer upholds the South's ideals.

"The South is obviously conservative. We don't have to sell a new idea. We just have to convince them they are wearing the wrong label," he said.

Ship Damaged When Hit In Port

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The Navy reported Saturday that the destroyer U. S. S. Pratt was damaged in port when hit by a freighter.

The collision occurred shortly before midnight as the merchantman Irish Spruce was backing from its berth at a grain pier and hit the destroyer which was tied up at the adjacent destroyer-submarine pier. No one was injured.

A Navy spokesman said the bow of the freighter raked the starboard side of the destroyer causing "considerable damage" above the waterline to the Pratt. There was no damage below the waterline and no flooding on the destroyer.

Damage to the Irish Spruce was minor.

Russia, China In Unique Spot

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Army chief of staff, said if Russia and China can exist side by side without a conflict, it would be "a situation unique in history."

Wheeler made the remark in addressing the first major session of the 45th state convention of the American Legion.

He pointed out the two Communist powers have their longest land boundaries with each other. Also, he said, they are prevented by their sea and air power inferiority from launching major aggression except over land areas.

Palmer, Snead Get Red Hot, Grab Western Open Tourney Lead

SAMMY SNEAD comes out of a deep trap on the 17th hole during the third round of the Western Open Golf tournament at Chicago Saturday. Snead, who was four strokes behind the leader at the start of the day, wound up tied with Arnold Palmer with a 207 for 54 holes, six under par. (AP Wirephoto)

Both Golfers Rack Up 207 3-Day Scores

CHICAGO (AP) — Arnold Palmer, sinking a closing 18-footer for a birdie, and Sammy Snead, putting like he owned the course, tied for the 54-hole lead in the $50,000 Western Open Golf Tourney with 6-under-par 207's Saturday.

Finishing in the final threesome right after Snead closed with a 3-under-par 68, leading money winner Palmer thrilled an announced Beverly Country Club Course crowd of 15,700 by rolling in his 18-footer for a 67.

Snead opened the day's play four strokes and Palmer five strokes behind the halfway leader, Fred (Hardluck) Hawkins, who slumped to a damaging 76 which gave him a 54-hole total of 211.

Hawkins, who has only won one tournament — the 1956 Oklahoma City Open—in 16 years on the PGA circuit, had held the 36-hole lead after rounds of 67 and 68.

Fourth at the three - quarter mark of the chase for the $10,000 top prize was Lionel Hebert, whose 72 over the windswept par 36-35—71 Beverly Course, gave him 212.

Snead, jaunty king of golf's Old Guard, quipped "I got no idea of winning anything, I'm just here for the fun" but the 51-year-old star obviously was pleased by his 35-33—68 round on which he had eight one-putt greens.

"If I putted like that at Dallas (in the recent PGA), I'd have won easy," said Sam.

Palmer, who shot a closing 31 after an opening 36, had seven one-putts, and bagged four birdies and five parts in his hot second nine.

Snead, whose birdie putts included a 50-foot tap on the 558-yard par five seventh and a 12-footer on the 388-yard par four 13th, scored his last official PGA triumph in the 1961 Tournament of Champions at Las Vegas. He won the Western Open twice more than a decade ago, in 1949 and 1950.

Palmer and Snead, photographed together in the press tent, joshed each other about each other's putting prowess and 33-year-old Palmer cracked: "Don't tell me anything about your 50-year-old nerves."

Victory Helps Atone Defeat To Russians

WARSAW (UPI) — A come-from-behind triumph by Jim Dupree in the 800-meter run and a sprint sweep by Henry Carr and Paul Drayton led the United States' mens track team to a 125-83 victory over Poland Saturday and erased some of the disappointment the Yanks suffered in Moscow.

The Americans won seven out of 10 men's events on Saturday's program — and a total of 16 out of 20 in two days — to show that they are a more powerful squad than their close 119-114 win over Russia last week indicated.

In addition, the U.S. women's team won two out of five events Saturday—four out of 10 in two days—and lost to the Polish women by a surprisingly close 58-47 score.

A half-capacity crowd of 40,000 watched the closing program at 10th Anniversary Stadium, believing at first that the Poles could make the final score close but finally having to settle for the fact that their team improved slightly on its 131-81 loss a year ago.

Dupree, Carr, and Drayton played major roles in dashing Polish hopes as they thwarted two of the host nation's greatest stars, miler Witold Baran and sprinter Marian Foik.

Baran, a square - shouldered, powerful runner who competed in the United States in the last indoor season and finished second in the 1,500 meters here Friday, had been counted on by Poland to take the 800 meters.

But Dupree, of Los Angeles, after trailing for the first 500 meters, stormed into the lead and then held off Baran's closing rush to win the event in 1:48.2, four-tenths of a second slower than his winning time at Moscow. Baran was right on his heels in 1:48.6 as four-minute miler Cary Weisiger of the U.S. Marines took third in 1:49.5.

It was a day of great disappointment for Foik, one of Europe's top sprinters. In the 200-meter dash, Carr of Arizona State, the world's fastest curved-track sprinter, led all the way to win in 20.8 seconds and Drayton of Cleveland nosed out Foik for second as both were timed in 21.0 seconds.

Then in the closing men's event, the 1,600 meter relay, the Polish team was disqualified when Foil dropped the baton on the leadoff flag.

The Miami, Fla., vaulter, who topped his own world record height of 16 feet, 8¾ inches in the United States—Poland meet here Friday, complained of an aching back before the event—and right after the vaulting he felt fine.

"Like many great athletes, John's a bit of a worrier," said one U.S. coach, "especially when a big meet is coming up.

"I'm not surprised that his back hurts since he's had a long season and the pole vaulters these days fall from some terrific heights. But when it's time to vault he always comes around.

"Actually, he was moaning about his back a few days ago." Some fellow wrote a story that it was really hurting and he couldn't find a trainer to help him.

"We all got a good laugh out of that, but John was embarrassed about it."

Campbell Gets Tennis Victory In Oklahoma

ADA, OKLA. (Special) Northeast State's Richard Campbell was the only Monroe entry to survive first day play in the large Sooner State Open Tennis tournament being unreeled here.

Over 200 college netters are performing in the affair which is slated to end this afternoon. The meet was scheduled to open Friday but was postponed when nine inches of rain fell on Ada.

Saturday, Campbell, who had a tremendous season with Northeast's Gulf States Conference champion tennis club this spring, captured a 6-3, 6-4, victory over Larry Waddell of Tulsa in his first round match.

The former Byrd star then rolled by Oklahoma City product John Cochrane, 10-8, 6-2, in his second round match. He is slated to play quarter-final action this afternoon with semi-finals and finals set for later in the day.

Margo Alvarez, the Indians' number one player this spring, won over Waddell, love and love in the first round but was defeated by Ear Bingamon of Ada, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1, in the second round.

GALLERY SWELLS

What A Parlay! Sammy Vs. Arnie

They were calling the 51-year-old Snead "the strongest senior golfer on the circuit" Saturday after he slammed 68 to tie Palmer, 17 years his junior, for the 54-hole lead of the Western Open.

Arnie had a 67. Both totalled 207—six strokes under the Beverly Country Club par for the distance.

It's a perfect crowd pleaser for Sunday's windup. Snead, winner of more major championships than any golfer in history, always has attracted throngs with his sweet swing.

Palmer still has his sign-carrying army.

The tourney drew 15,300 customers Saturday. More should swarm out for the finals.

Snead and Palmer will be in different threesomes, bringing headaches to gallery marshalls as the fans flit back and forth to watch their favorites.

The two leaders posed together for picture-taking.

"So you are one-putting again—you old dickens," said Arnie, slapping Sam on the back.

"Yep, I had eight one-putters," grinned Sam.

"If I putted like I did today at Dallas (in the PGA) I would have won," added Snead, who finished there in a tie for 27th after taking 139 strokes on the greens for the 72 holes.

"I had as many shots as I did putts. I was pressing my putter head too hard to the turf—what what am I saying? I'm not going to tell any more of my secrets."

Snead had a total of 29 putts Saturday. Palmer, who has been troubled with his putter lately, also had 29 with seven one-stroke greens.

In rounds of 73-67-67, Arnie gradually has been saving strokes on the greens. He needed 38 putts on his first round, shaving it to 30 on the second and now to 29.

Snead's last victory was in the 1961 Tournament Of Champions in Las Vegas. His best showings this year were second in the Doral Open at Miami, a tie for third in the Masters and a tie for fourth in the Cleveland Open. He is 22nd on the money list with $18,884.

Since he turned pro at the age of 17, the West Virginian has won 112 tourneys of one kind or another.

Although Palmer has cooled off lately, he is winner of five tournaments this year and tops the money list with $85,955. The Western Open winner gets $10,000.

TRESH, PEPITONE BLAST

Yankees Clobber Twins As Terry Gets Decision

NEW YORK (AP)—Tom Tresh and Joe Pepitone drove in all the New York Yankees runs in a 5-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday as Ralph Terry won his 11th with a seven-hitter. Harmon Killebrew's 23rd homer leading off the ninth spoiled Terry's shutout bid.

A crowd of 40,070 turned out in 97-degree temperature to see a special Old Timers' Day program that included a two-inning exhibition game between "all time record breakers" preceding the regular game. The American League stars won 6-0.

Tresh drove in three runs with a two-run homer in the third and a sacrifice fly in the first following singles by Tony Kubek and Bobby Richardson. It was Treshs 17th homer.

Pepitone also hit No. 17 off loser Bill Pleis in the second inning. Pepitone's single off relief man Jim Kaat knocked in Roger Maris whose third inning double had knocked out Pleis.

The Twins had five of their hits in the first three innings when they left four men on base. The Yanks were held hitless in the last 51-3 innings by Kaat and Ray Moore.

7TH INNING FEAT

Milwaukee Rally Edges Reds, 5-4

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves pushed over two runs off reliever Jim Owens in the seventh inning to come from behind for a 5-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday. Pinch hitter Frank Bolling drove in the winnng run with a squeeze bunt.

Hank Fischer, second of three Milwaukee pitchers, received credit for the victory with help from Bob Shaw. The latter took over with none out and a man on first in the eighth and gave up only one harmless single. It was Shaws eighth save since he went to the bullpen last month.

Owens took over in the seventh in an attempt to protect a 4-3 lead for starter Joey Jay who had been lifted for a pinch hitter. Eddie Mathews greeted him with a triple and scored the tying run on Henry Aaron's third hit, a single.

Aaron went to second on Lee Maye's sacrifice and stole third.

With a count of 2-1 on Mack Jones, left-hander Bill Henry replaced Owens and Bolling batted for Jones. Bolling bunted Henry's first pitch toward the mound and Aaron scored easily.

The Reds jumped off to a 3-0 lead off Bob Sadowski in the first three innings, but the Braves pulled even with two runs in the third and one in the fourth. The Reds regained the advantage in the fifth when Gordy Coleman drove in his second run.

JACKSON TAKES LOSS

Surging Cards Defeat Cubs Behind Simmons

CHICAGO (AP) — The surging St. Louis Cardinals came from behind Saturday to win their ninth of the last 11 games by hanging a 3-2 kayo on the Chicago Cubs.

The second Chicago run was the result of a fluke — three wild pitches. It was scored by Jimmy Schaffer, running for catcher Dick Bertell, who singled to open the eighth inning.

Ron Taylor, second of the winners' three pitchers, made two of the errant tosses before Bobby Shantz made the third.

This inning also produced a history-making oddity—a pinch batter for Ernie Banks. Originally announced to swing for shortstop Andre Rodgers, Banks was sidetracked when St. Louis switched from starter lefty Curt Simmons to Taylor.

Simmons, posting his ninth win in beating the Cubs a second time this season, saw Chicago take a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Billy Williams' 14th homer. It was a tremendous shot over the right field catwalk to land outside the park.

Judy Bell Wins AtTrans-Miss

DENVER (AP) — Judy Bell played steadily in wind, rain and chilly temperatures to conquer Carol Sorenson 3 and 1 in the 36-hole final of the Women's Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament Saturday.

The 26-year-old Colorado Springs, Colo., miss held a 5 up lead on the 30th hole but Miss Sorenson, 20, Arizona State University coed from Janesville, Wis. cut the margin to 2 up on the 34th but then ran into putter trouble.

Carol, former Western Women's titleholder, three - putted nine greens in the 35 holes of the match.

Judy won her first Trans-Miss title when Carol conceded her a three-foot putt for a par 3 on the 35th. Miss Sorenson's bid for a par after she chipped from a sand trap on the same hole failed when her 10-foot try was short.

Good Recruiting

Louisiana State may have its ups and downs in football this year, but Head Coach Charley McClendon can draw consolation in the fine crop of prepsters the Bengals signed.

Twenty-one of the high school football players who will participate in the annual all-star tilt in Baton Rouge Aug. 1 inked pacts with the Bergels.

The game, annually sponsored by the Louisiana High School Coaches Association, is supposed to group together the best prep talent in the state.

For example, Robert Marrus, the bulldozing fullback from Jonesboro-Hodge, isn't on the roster. Marrus, who may be the best fullback in the state, is going to LSU.

Wayne Davis from Woodlawn of Shreveport, an end who can block, tackle and catch passes with the best of them, didn't make the 1962 team. Later on the same year as a college freshman, Davis was named outstanding lineman in the state fair game between Louisiana Tech and Northwestern in Shreveport.

But the game does draw some of the finest talent in the state.

All four did well in their freshman year. Granger, a bruising fullback, personally led Mississippi State's freshman team, while the other three saw varsity action with Gulf States Conference teams. Patrick, the Holly Ridge gridder, was a starter at Northwestern.

The Breakdown

Of the 21 all-star performers signed by LSU this year, 13 will be on the East team which is made up of South Louisiana high schools. The West team, on which the other eight play, is drawn from schools in North and Southwest Louisiana.

All three LSU signees from West Monroe, end Richard Jones, tackle-halfback Mike Shepherd and halfback Charles VanZile, have been invited to the game.

Other area all-stars going to LSU are Billy Masters from LaSalle and Ronald Jeter from Ferriday.

Louisiana Tech ranked second behind LSU in signing prepsters in the all-star game with 10. Southwestern, in its best recruiting year under Coach Russ Faulkinberry, followed with seven.

Bad Publicity

The publicity campaign for the Houston Oilers' game with the New York Jets in Shreveport Aug. 9 is being built around the numerous home state athletes on the two teams.

The campaign received a series of bad jolts this week and last. This is what happened:

Paul Hynes, former Louisiana Tech halfback, and Sid Fournet, a Louisiana State All-American, both reported to the Jets camp overweight and were run off until they could trim down.

No doubt promotors of the game have their fingers crossed that nothing happens to LSU's Billy Cannon or Northwestern State aces Charlie Tolar and Charlie Hennigan before the game.

Sports Shorts

The Angeles plan to keep three quarterbacks: Romain Gabriel from North Carolina State, Zeke Bratkowski, the Georgia U. star, and Terry Baker from Oregon State, their No. 1 draft choice.

Ray Washburn, the former St. Louis Cardinal rookie who got off to such a sensational start before arm trouble hobbled him, is now with Tulsa of the Texas league. The Cardinals got Washburn on loan for their exhibition game with Kansas City earlier this week.

STATE FINALS HERE

Dixie Boys Play Elimination Meet

Eight teams will compete in the Louisiana championship Dixie Boys Baseball Tournament, a double elimination meet, beginning here Monday. The Louisiana winner qualifies for the Dixie Boys World Series at Hattiesburg, Miss., a week later.

Southside of Monroe qualified as the tournament host in a battle with the Northside All-Stars here a week ago.

Tangi of Amite was also an early qualifier. Other district champions were still in the process of being determined Saturday.

Jack Hesketh, Monroe recreation director and secretary of Dixie Boys baseball here, announced a schedule of four games for Monday and Tuesday. The tournament champion should be decided by next Friday.

6 p.m. — District 1 vs. District 6 (Tangi).

8 p.m. — District 5 East vs. Host (Monroe Southside).

Tuesday's games, with the same starting times, will match Monday's losers in two games to bring about two eliminations, and Monday's winners will meet in two other contests.

All games will be played on the Northside Dixie League field on Westminster avenue.

Louisiana Tech Football Tickets Ready For Sale

RUSTON (Special) — Season tickets for four Louisiana Tech home football games will go on sale at the athletic office at the college Thursday, Aug. 1, Athletic Director Joe Aillet announced.

Persons holding reserved seat tickets last year have until Sept. 1 to claim the same seats again this season, Aillet said.

Tech's first home game will be against Louisiana College Oct. 5. The homecoming contest will be the following weekend, Oct. 12, against Southwestern Louisiana.

The Bulldogs will close out the champion with two home games, Nov. 16 against Southern Mississippi and Nov. 23 against Northeast State.

All will be night games, starting at 8 o'clock, with exception of the homecoming game against USL which will begin at 2 p.m.

Bateman Blasts Homer In 8th To Defeat Mets

HOUSTON (AP) — John Bateman's eighth-inning home run settled a pitching battle between Bob Bruce and Roger Craig Saturday night and sent the Houston Colts to a 1-0 victory over New York's win-starved Mets.

Bateman's homer on the first pitch in the bottom of the eighth was only the fourth hit off Craig, who lost his 16th straight. For the Mets, the loss was the 10th in a row and the 21st straight on the road, extending their major league record.

DURING WOLVERINE OPEN

Footbridge At Golf Course Falls, One Player Injured

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP)—At least 25 persons, including golf star Jo Ann Prentice, were injured Saturday in the collapse of a suspension footbridge spanning a river flowing through a golf course.

Witnesses said 40 to 50 people were flung into the waters of the Clinton River at the Hillcrest Club, where the second round of the Women's Wolverine Open Golf Tournament was being played.

Some of those on the bridge, mostly tournament spectators, plunged 20 feet to the water. Others rode the bridge down. Still others were pitched over a wire mesh, witnesses said.

Ambulances took the injured to St. Joseph and General hospitals. A golf club spokesman said all the persons on the bridge later were accounted for.

Miss Prentice, 30, veteran golf pro from Birmingham, Ala., was reported to have suffered leg cuts and possible internal injuries.

Two other golfers, Ruth Jessen of Seattle and Marlene Hagge of Delray Beach, Fla., had just walked off the bridge before the collapse.

The wood-planking bridge, about 200 feet long, was supported by steel cables. The river is five or six feet deep in the bridge area. The bridge is near the 17th hole of the course.

The golf club spokesman said hooks attached to the cables bent under the weight of the people. The bridge had been reinforced this spring in anticipation of the tournament crowd, the spokesman said.

As it collapsed, the bridge swung to one side in an arc. People fell or were thrown off.

Francona Hit Gives Indians Win Over A's

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tito Francona lined a double to right center in the ninth inning to knock in the run that gave the Cleveland Indians a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Athletics Saturday.

The Athletics whacked Early Wynn hard, getting two runs on eight hits in 4 1-3 innings before chasing the 43-year-old right-hander who was bidding for his 301st career victory.

Singles by Bobby Del Greco, Wayne Causey and Norm Siebern produced a run in the first frame. A single by pitcher Diego Segui and a triple by Gino Cimoli made it 2-0 in the fifth. On Cimoli's line drive, center fielder Willie Kirkland misjudged the ball and it sailed over his head.

Giants' Win Over Pirates As Marichal Takes 17th

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Three Pittsburgh throwing errors in the eighth inning gave San Francisco two runs for its sixth straight victory, 3-1 over the Pirates, and made Juan Marichal the top winning pitcher in the majors.

With the score 1-1 entering the last of the eighth, Jose Pagan rapped a leadoff single against reliever Alvin McBean. Marichal bunted, McBean went for a force at second and threw the ball into center field. Bill Virdon tried to catch Pagan going into third and threw the ball away, Pagan scoring and Marichal romping to third.

Harvey Kuenn flied to short right and after bluffing Marichal back to third, Roberto Clemente threw the ball far over catcher Smoky Burgess' head and Marichal scored.

Marichal yielded six hits but did not walk a man. Bob Friend pitched a four-hitter through seven innings for the Pirates but was lifted for a pinch-hitter, bringing on McBean, now 9-3.

The Gants combined singles by Ed Bailey and Orlando Cepeda with Pagan's sacrifice fly for a run in the second inning.

Marichal blanked Pittsburgh on three singles until two out in the seventh, when he gave up a line drive home run to Willie Stargell that curled fair around the right field foul pole.

Sadowski Leads Angels To Win Over Bosox, 5-2

BOSTON (AP) — Los Angeles pinchhitter Bob Sadowski drove in the tying run on a force out, stole second and scored on Jim Fregosi's single in the seventh inning Saturday as the Angels rallied to defeat Boston 5-2.

Solid mopup relief by Art Fowler, fourth Angels hurler, helped Dean Chance capture the decision.

Jimmy Piersall, whose acquisition as a free agent by Los Angeles was announced only a half hour before game time, followed a walk with a single to get the Angels' big seventh going. Piersall was playing center field and batting eighth against his former mates.

Labor Day For Hunters

With Sam Hanna

Dove Season Opens

Hurry up, Labor Day!

That's the way a lot of Louisiana sportsmen feel, since the first of the hunting seasons opens September 2nd — long before frost on the first pumpkin.

The Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission set the dove season to open September 2nd, which is Labor Day, with a three - way split for 70 half - days.

This gives the sportsman an early break to get into the field with the other seasons to follow soon, probably around the first of October for bushytails.

Because of a decline in parts of the nation, the U. S. Fish & Wildlife Service, which regulates seasons on migratory birds, cut back on the days and bag limit for Louisiana dove hunters.

For that reason the bag limit this year will be 10 instead of 12.

Louisiana's first dove leg will run from September 2-16, the second from October 12 - November 3, and the third from December 7 - January 7.

This should give everybody an equal chance to get out for some dove shooting — a sport that is increasing in popularity each year.

While the government has noted a decline in birds in parts of the country, Louisiana biologists report a stable population of doves here.

That doesn't mean there'll be doves everywhere on opening days, because doves migrate.

But more than likely there'll be an ample supply of doves on hand for opening day in Northeast Louisiana. It's really just a case of locating them.

Dove hunters shouldn't wait until the last day to line up a place to hunt. It's too early to tell now where they'll concentrate, but the hunter can get a pretty good idea ahead of time.

With the season opening in early September, it gives the all-around hunter a sport practically eight months out of the year—from doves to turkeys.

Opening day of the dove season is just over a month away. It couldn't come too soon.

Probe Fish Kill

Robert Lafleur, chief of the pollution division of the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission, says a final report on the Ouachita River fish kill would be ready sometimes this week.

Louisiana biologists believe the kill was the result of "industrial pollution" from Arkansas. For that reason, Arkansas authorities were called in.

Bob Lafleur explained that Marvin Wood, who holds a comparable position in Arkansas, had men on assignment when the Ouachita kill was reported. Thus, Wood had to wait a day or so to put somebody on the investigation, according to Lafleur.

Jim Davis, fisheries biologist here, explained that the "industrial pollution" cut down on the amount of oxygen in the river. If the river had been higher, there is a possibility the kill would not have happened.

Several tons of fish were killed — of all kinds.

And the kill pointed up the evil of stream pollution, although some who look at water strictly from a standpoint of fishing may not think the pollution problem is serious.

But all of us should realize that the nation as a whole faces a problem of maintaining clean water for personal consumption, industry and recreation. We are fortunate in this area because we have an ample water supply.

Once completed, the Bayou Bartholomew pump project will enhance Monroe's water source by bringing more good water into Bayou DeSiard.

The Ouachita, unlike the Mississippi River, is not big enough to take care of pollution on its own. For that reason, it is important that we take the proper steps to clean up the river.

Local municipalities and industry have such plans. But the sooner they're carried out the better off all of us will be.

50-Day Season Proposed

The Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission recommends a 50-day duck season for 1963 - 64 with a basic bag limit of four ducks and an addition bonus of four scaup.

This apparently will be presented to the Mississippi Flyway Council at its August meeting in St. Louis.

After attending the congressional hearings on waterfowl in Washington July 18-19, Director L. D. Young Jr. is hopeful for a better duck season in Louisiana.

He said, "This will probably result in more justifiable seasons and bag limits in the future."

Young expressed confidence that the result of the Washington hearings would bring about a closer look at all of the factors involved in setting the 1963-64 duck season by the U. S. Fish & Wildlife Service.

The hearings were attended by a Louisiana delegation, plus delegations from other Mississippi Flyway states and representatives of the Fish & Wildlife Service.

Young said the conclusion of the hearings indicated general agreement that preservation of habitat was more important than minor changes in hunting seasons, and that fall hunting can be allowed without endangering the resource.

During the hearing, Young said it was brought out that drastic changes in hunting seasons would lead to abandonment of waterfowl management programs by private and state organizations throughout the nation.

Last year Louisiana got a 19½-day season with a two - duck limit, including only one mallard.

Little Man's Corner

It was stormy, but the fishing was good and the little men made news afield.

One of the best reports came from West Monroe fishermen M. J. Joiner Jr. and his son-in-law, C. L. (Moe) McGouirk. They caught the limit of crappie at Bussey, but brought out "only" 99 after Moe released the last one caught.

From Delhi, Mr. and Mrs. Alvie Lambert, joined by Miss Bradberry, landed 55 white perch at Lake Concordia. Claude Rinnicker of Lake Providence landed 70 bream on crickets at Gassoway and Mr. and Mrs. Red Ezelle got a nice string also.

John H. Burton caught the limit of bream in Lake Providence. He also landed seven bass. On another fishing trip in the big lake, he snared four bass, one weighing five pounds.

At Lake St. John, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Smart of Cotton Valley caught the limit of bream on worms. William Butler of Winnsboro did too.

Carl Frost and Thompson George of West Monroe also caught the limit of bream at St. John. Pete Wardell of Ferriday landed the limit of bass in Lake Concordia.

John Williams of Vidalia caught the limit of bass at Minarco near Ferriday. Two of them went over five pounds.

Mrs. Thomas Guerico, who lives on St. John, caught a 27-pound catfish in St. John.

Locally, the Old Regulars continue to catch bass in Black Bayou—fishermen like Sam Ladart, Joe Danna and Paul Danna. John Elmendorff came by the office with the evidence which was a box full of bass.

Texans Accept Gator Bowl Bid

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — University of Texas has accepted an invitation to play in the 1964 Gator Bowl basketball tournament it was announced Saturday.

Coach Hal Bradley led Texas to third place in the NCAA tournament last year. That team was heavily sprinkled with sophomores who will be seniors for the Gator Bowl tournament.

Texas is the second team to accept a bid for the four-team tourney which will be played in the Jacksonville Coliseum Dec. 29-30, 1964. Florida was the first team to be signed.

IN MIDSUMMER CLASSIC

College All-Stars Try To Dent Packers Wall

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP)—Although they are almost three touchdown underdogs the College All-Stars still may find a chink in the tough armor of the National Football League champion Green Bay Packers in the 30th All-Star Game at Soldier Field Friday night.

The midsummer grid classic under the lights Aug. 2 will find prowise Coach Otto Graham marshalling the biggest, toughest and most talented graduates of the 1962 collegiate grid crop for this season meeting with the Packers.

The Packers won 42-20 last year, but led only 21-20 entering the final period. It took a record-breaking performance by Green Bay's quarterback, Bart Starr, to give the pros their fourth straight triumph in the series.

Friday night's contest will be televised and broadcast nationally by ABC starting at 8:45 p.m. EST.

The champion Packers will be lacking suspended star, Paul Hornung, who with Jim Taylor, accounted for more than half of Green Bay's 125 rushing yards against the 1962 All-Stars.

Hornung gained 32 yards on only six carries against Taylor's 39 on 13 thrusts in a Packer ground threat that helped set up a record five touchdown passes by Starr.

The early line has Green Bay pegged a 16-point favorite, but Graham may have rounded up a giant-killing array in his sixth consecutive All-Star head man assignment.

Graham and his staff, including Dick Stanfel, Tommy O'Connell, Johnny Sauer, Dante Lavelli, and Mike Scarry, have worked since July 11 with a 49-player squad beefed by some 15 behemoths weighing at least 250 pounds, a quartet of fine running quarterbacks and a batch of rugged backs.

There also is a big collection of big secondary men, which is quite important against the sharp aerial shots of Green Bay's passes'. Lack of height in key defensive back positions hurt the all-stars last year.

So did what Graham now concedes was a tactical blunder—failure to keep Kansas' John Hadl at quarterback after a hot first quarter in which Hadl completed his first five passes, setting up a touchdown which gave the All-Stars a 7-0 jump on the Packers.

This time if Oregon State's Terry Baker, Wisconsin's Ron VanderKelen, Sonny Gibbs of Texas Christian or Mississippi's Glynn Griffing shows a hot quarterback hand early, one of the four may be given every chance to make it a one-man show.

The last All-Star victory came in 1958—Graham's first All - Star year—when Bobby Mitchell of Illinois paced the collegians to a 35-19 triumph over the Detroit Lions. That gave the All-Stars their eighth victory in a series now listing 19 pro decisions and two ties.

The individual brilliance of some 1963 All-Star again may counteract the pro advantages of well-honed team-work, great talent and abundant experience.

Graham's ball - toting crew includes such speedsters as Larry Ferguson of Iowa, Charlie Mitchell of Washington and Bob Paremore of Florida A & M and such blasters as Ben Wilson of Southern California, Bill Thornton of Nebraska and Roger Kochman of Penn State.

It's a safe bet that Graham's passers will try early and often to find a consistent target—either one of the fast backs or such heralded ends as Wisconsin's Pat Richter (VanderKelen's Badger battery mate), Washington State's Hugh Campbell and Northwesterns Paul Flatley, actually a flanker back.

The All-Star defense may hub around 225 - pound Penn State tackle Chuck Siemenski and linebackers Lee Roy Jordan of Alabama, Lee Roy Caffey of Texas A&M and Arkansas' Danny Brabham.

The college offensive line is almost an All-Big Ten array, averaging 250 and including tackles Bob Vogel and Daryl Sanders of Ohio State, guard Ed Budde and center Dave Behrman of Michigan State and Clemson's guard Don Chuy.

'Side Shows' Are Causing Problems For PGA Tour

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Arnold Bockstruck, president of the International Golf Sponsors Association, charged Saturday promoters of "side show" golf events have been causing big trouble.

"For their own gain these promoters are running the pros around to the detriment of their own health, their golf game, their own PGA organization and the very tournaments which built them in the first place," said Bockstruck in a statement.

A St. Paul jeweler, Bockstruck is newly - elected head of the IGSA. It sponsors annually some 30 tournaments representing more than $1.5 million in prize money.

At their annual meeting in Dallas last week, the sponsors unanimously passed two resolutions dealing with the side events that attract a few big names and cutting up the television-radio revenue pie. Sponsors say they should have the right to such revenues to build up the tourneys or donate it to charitable causes.

Bockstruck said that in the past few days he has received "an ever increasing crescendo of support by major tournament sponsors in favor of the IGSA stand."

The most recent side event announced is a $50,000 exhibition involving Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player, the so-called Big Three of golf. It's scheduled for Chicago next month at the same time as the Denver Open—the second year in a row Denver has had such competition. Last year the "World Series of Golf" in Akron kept Palmer, Player and Nicklaus away from Denver.

Bockstruck said sponsors of the special events have been causing big troubles for the professional golfer, the Professional Golfers Association and the regular tour sponsors for many years.

He declared the sponsors contribute months of preparatory work in putting on a tournament and takes all risks of financial loss, and personally negotiate TV-radio coverage, which is used to increase prize money.

"Any TV-radio revenue resulting from sponsorship of a tournament belongs to the sponsor, just as revenue from ticket sales and concessions are also rightfully his," Bockstruck added.

"However, we want to get along with the PGA and are willing to cooperate with them in helping to develop a tournament players pension fund."

The IGSA president said he will meet next week with Lionel Hebert, PGA tournament committee chairman, to arrange final plans for a joint IGSA, PGA, and tournament players committee meeting scheduled for Aug. 20 in Akron.

The "side show" events and TV-radio revenue will be main topics.

Grambling Star Signs Contract With Baltimore

Wilkerson was signed by veteran scout West Allis. He is 19.

The 6-2, 192-pound athlete was a star on the Grambling team that advanced to the finals of the NAIA (small college) tournament in St. Joseph, Mo., last month.

He completed his freshman year at Grambling where he was so called "Stoneface" by teammates because of his - serious approach to the game.

Wilkerson is a native of Milwaukee, Wis.

He is the fourth member of the 1963 Grambling nine to ink a professional contract.

Earlier Frank Garnett signed for $30,000 with Washington, and Donald Welch and Jesse Jones signed with the Chicago White Sox for an undisclosed sum.

Lock Plates 5 In Celebration

DETROIT (AP) — Don Lock celebrated his 27th birthday Saturday by driving in five runs with two homers, a double and a sacrifice fly as the last-place Washington Senators continued their mastery over the Detroit Tigers 8-4.

Claude Osteen pitched the Senators to within 6½ games of the ninth place Tigers. Washington made it two victories in a row in what manager Gil Hodges calls a big series for his club and has beaten the Tigers six times in eight meetings.

IN DOUBLEHEADER

Nicholson Sparks Sox Past Orioles

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dave Nicholson, the ex-Baltimore bonus baby, rapped out five hits and knocked in five runs as the Chicago White Sox swept Saturday's twi-night doubleheader from the Orioles, 5-3 and 10-1.

The two victories moved the White Sox into second place in the American League ahead of Baltimore, 8½ games behind the New York Yankees.

Nicholson knocked in three runs with a homer and a double in the opener, and batted two more runs in while collecting a double and two singles in the second game.

Ron Hansen, who along with Nicholson was traded by Baltimore to Chicago last winter, also had three hits in the second game as the White Sox pounded four Oriole pitchers for 15 hits.

Mike McCormick, Baltimore's starter, was chased during a four-run rally in the second inning. Chicago added six runs in the sixth and seventh innings off reliever George Brunet, with the runs in the seventh unearned because of two Baltimore errors.

The World For WOMEN

At left: Proving there's no better spot than a swimming pool for keeping cool is Miss Nancy Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Fitzhugh Wilson, 1109 N. 4th, shown perched on the diving board of the pool in the tree-shaded yard at the Howard Lance home. Her novelty chapeau is of vivid turquoise feathers on a head-hugging straw frame.

At right: Looking as cool as her surroundings is Miss Lea Thompson, whose gay hat, appropriately called the 'artichoke' is a filmy creation of olive green organza petals anchored by gold mesh. Its perfect companion for summer fun is an oversize tote bag of gold mesh straw, lavishly bedecked with the organza petals. Miss Thompson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lea S. Thompson, 1801 Oakmont.

Keep a Cool Head On a Hot Day

At left: Looking pensive as she plans the remainder of her summer vacation is Miss Joan Dillon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Dillon, 1010 Hilton Ave. A perfect foil for Miss Dillon's blond tresses is this wide-brimmed sun hat of pink raffia straw, with layers of self-fringe to catch the summer breezes.

Below at left: A 'fun' day is being planned here by Miss Carol Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winnie E. Cole, 1700 Emerson, shown wearing a hat to match her mood. The gay creation of feathers in pastel shades of pink, blue and green on a brimmed straw, is match-mated with an equally zany feathered tote bag, destined to be a conversation piece at any gathering.

WELL, our weather may be somewhat alarming at times, but Monroe is one of the more Southernly hospitable places to visit. No place does one find a gayer round of activity planned for the out of town visitor.

Here this week as the guest of LESSIE GARRETT is ELIZABETH JAMES of Overland Park, Kansas, who arrived Wednesday by air. Lessie and Elizabeth are friends of long standing who have not seen each other in over twenty years. Parties planned for Elizabeth included a tea yesterday afternoon at the home of LUCILLE TURPIN, when Lessie and VIRGIE SUE SMITH of Bastrop were co-hostesses.

Others who have planned entertainment for the visitor have been RUTH and BUDDY MADISON, who invited her for supper on Wednesday; MAE WALSWORTH, hostess for luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club on Thursday; FRANCES MONTGOMERY, whose compliment was supper on Thursday evening; and ANNA GRAY NOE, who entertained at luncheon Friday.

Today FRANCES M'HENRY has invited Elizabeth and Lessie for dinner. MARIE BENDEL is planning a supper party for tomorrow, and ELOISE SLATOR is to be hostess for luncheon at the Lotus club on Tuesday, with ETHEL BOARDMAN entertaining on Wednesday.

And speaking of Frances McHenry, she is also having a house party at her home. Her daughter CORNELIA GRANT with two daughters LAURIE and ANN, flew in Thursday from Louisville, Kentucky. They will be here about three weeks in all.

Here from Alexandria this week was EDITH RICHARDSON, who visited her cousin, CYNTHIA LEIGH. Edith, a recent graduate of Bolton High school, is to enter Randolph Macon this fall.

On Wednesday, Cynthia invited eighteen of the college - bound crowd to meet Edith at luncheon at her home. A pink theme was carried out on the two dining tables, which were covered with pink and green calladium leaves. The menu included shrimp salad, congealed salads, hot asparagus, rolls, and fudge sundaes with cookies.

MAG TAYLOR also entertained in honor of Edith, her niece with luncheon at the Lotus club on Thursday. Green calladium leaves decorated the table in the library for this party. Those invited to share this occasion with Edith and Cynthia were NANCY CROSSLAND, KATHY M'SHERRY, KATHLEEN COCHRAN, BARBARA JACKSON, MARTHA GUYTON, DIANE WEST, and KATIE TRIMBLE.

Gayest table at Bayou DeSiard country club was that occupied by a luncheon honoring young Miss FRANCES HENDERSON of Shreveport, who is visiting in Bastrop. Ruth Madison was hostess to twelve boys and girls Wednesday at noon. Centerpiece was a pink bowl filled with pink roses. Tiny parasols, pink, yellow, and aqua, stood at each girls' place, with party snappers for boys. Balloons to blow up and let squeal were excellent ice-breakers. Those attending this party included MARY GLADNEY of Vidalia, SUSAN BROWN, LOU LEMERT, ANNA JOHNS, BETSY HOLMES, CHARLES WESTROM, GEORGE and JOHN SHACKLEFORD of Jones, ERNEST and DAVID MULVEY, and EDWARD LEE GLADNEY IV of Vidalia.

The Gladney and Mulvey children were here with their parents as guests of their grandparents, the SHELBY MEEKS. LT. COL. and MRS. GORDON ERNEST MULVEY arrived last Friday and leave tomorrow. They are en route from Ottawa, Canada, to his new station in Montgomery, Alabama. The E. L. GLADNEYS, III, joined them here for the weekend.

Another group of grandchildren in town have been visiting LOUISE and THOMAS LEIGH at their home on South Grand street. The guests were MIKE and LOUISE NORMANN, ROBBIE and CONNI FAUST, who came on Sunday and were here till Friday . . . . . On Wednesday, CHRISTINE MOORE invited twelve children for luncheon at her home honoring her cousins, followed by a swim at Bayou DeSiard country club later in the afternoon.

ANN SIEGEL of Baton Rouge was another out of town visitor who attended Christine's party. Ann has been here visiting the SEYMOUR SOLOMONS this week, plans to return home today.

Guest of HELEN LUCKETT this week has been her sister, MRS. ISAAC H. CASE of Amite, who arrived Tuesday and is to leave today. Helen honored her guest with a luncheon at the Lotus club on Wednesday, and INA GAINES entertained at luncheon Thursday.

Out at the LEO TERZIA home on Loop road, CYNTHIA has been entertaining her cousins, SALLY and RETTA GANDY of Tallulah. On Wednesday, LILLIAN SHAW invited a few close friends to meet Cynthia's visitors. Calladium leaves and roses in a silver bowl decorated the table, where the buffet included chicken salad and pimiento sandwiches, assorted cookies, doughnuts, and bottled soft drinks. Conversation and cards were the order of the morning.

Thursday LIBBY and LISA ELLIS were hostesses at an outdoor party honoring Sally and Retta. Fifteen boys and girls were invited for a late afternoon scavenger hunt. Later, hot dog supper was served, with the young people cooking their own in the backyard.

Texas visitors in the home of the C. W. WALLACES have been MRS. C. W. WALLACE, JR., of Wichita Falls, Texas, with her daughter, LARUE, and her friend ADRIAN ACKER. The guests will be here through this week.

Leaving yesterday after a visit at the CLARK BOARDMAN Home were MAXINE and GRANT BOARDMAN of Big Springs, Texas. JOAN BOARDMAN PECK of Springfield, Virginia, plans to remain in Monroe until daughter DIANE returns from Camp Waldemar the end of the summer.

Word has been received from Orleans, France, of a party held there honoring BILLIE BLAZIER of West Monroe. Billie, who is a teacher in the American School maintained for children of service personnel, has been holding classes in English for the French people of the community. The reception was held by the Chamber of Commerce of Orleans honoring Billie and two others who have been helping in the classes. Billie has been teaching abroad for about six years, in Newfoundland, Athens, Okinawa, and Paris, France.

"The Indian Captive," children's play currently on the boards at Strauss Playhouse, points up the variety of possibility in children's theatre. This is the fourth play for young people in the last two years, and the fourth different type.

Earlier plays produced by Little Theatre of Monroe and Northeast Louisiana State college have been "King Midas and the Golden Touch," based on the Greek myth; and "The Clown and His Circus," a fantasy of a clown and his almost-human animals. In collaboration with the Junior Charity League, the Little Theatre presented the fairy tale "Hansel and Gretel" during the Christmas season.

An historical incident is told in "The Indian Captive," with authentic costumes and staging depicting the life of the Tunica Indians, who lived in this area. In the lobby are decorations reflecting the theme of the play with Indian lore and pioneer life. Members of Comanche Lodge No. 254, Order of the Arrow, are on hand at each performance in their Indian costumes.

Refreshments are served to the young audiences during intermission of "The Indian Captive." Hostesses for today's matinee at 2:30 are COURTNEY CURRY, BETSY FILES, NANCY WARDLAW, and MARTHA HEUER.

High Fashion Lines Shown In Fur Coats

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

In some circles furs which cost only $1,000 are little furs. The circles are of those women to whom a mink coat has long been standard, so standard that they are bored with it.

So they buy white Asian lamb, calf and jaguar in coats with high fashion lines. What if they will be outdated in a season or two? They're only little $1,000 furs.

The favorite silhouette right now is a high waisted look, whether in reefer or redingote shape. White lamb appears in belted raincoat styling, jaguar or calf in the high - waist coats.

The idea is to treat furs like fabric. Stores carrying these little furs usually have a name designer, too, like Emeric Partos or James Terence Brady, who are the Balenciagas of fur.

As for big furs, mink still leads at $6,000 and up, but it must be high - styled too for this kind of customer.

Ski Wear Next Sports Rage

Last year the big sportswear influences were from sailing and riding clothes. This year the rage will probably be ski-wear.

Last fall, sportswear sellers reported that ski-wear meant for active skiers was cutting into regular sportswear sales. In particular skiers was cutting into regular sportswear sales. In particular, parkas edged out car coats.

Sportswear designers are quick to take a hint, so look for ski influences in regular fall sportswear. Nylon shells, stretch ski pants, and the bold ski sweaters will all be part of the new sportswear look.

Fashion Pace-Makers Promote Casual Look

By- PATRICIA MCCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Mirror, mirror, on the wall—what's the fashion look for fall?"

Answers to that question—as varied as the tastes and figures of damsels along Main St., U.S.A. come from the nation's garment district.

Along New York's Seventh Ave. —workshop of those who keep us women in stitches—they're hootin' about bootin', among other things.

The boots, knee-length, have gained a toe-hold as an accent for the casual look promoted by pace-setting designers for fall.

The stampede to boots, for city slickers as well as country bumpkins, tops the casual, sportive, relaxed look.

CAPE SHAPES

But there's also a fur piece to the fall fashion scene. Fur encircles cuffs, hems and necklines. Some designers lean to undercover fur, using pelts for linings of coats and jackets.

Classic questions in the fashion future include: Which way the hemline; how goes the waist; and to what extent does milady's figure figure in the togs which will be in stores across the country by late July?

—Waistlines, meanwhile, wander. The dropped, the raised, the natural waistline figure in most collections.

OTHER PREDICTIONS

—Costumes come with the wrapped up look. Samples: jackets over sleeveless dresses, capes or coat over jackets. There are doublets, panels in front and back that slip over the head and let the arms of an under-dress show, and over all, a matching coat or cape.

—For daytime suits, dresses and coats, watch for raglan shoulders. Most sleeves are full length —to the wrist—and narrow.

—At home clothes never have been so elegant. Included are jump suits or trouser sets in silk or velvet, covered with long tailored evening coats or flowing mantles. White culottes, full enough to look like an evening skirt, figure in most at-home collections.

—The elegant look, on the fashion scene for many seasons now, continues. Fabulous bead embroideries make short and long cocktail gowns sparkle. Some of the beaded costumes are accented with fur. The most elegant of the elegant: a white mink dress!

—Velvet heads the fabric parade. It's used for business, cocktail and dance dresses. Velvet suits most often have chanel lines. But there's also mixing on the fabric front. Samples: velvet shown with wool, tweeds against glitter, flannels against camel hair, fleece against broadcloth.

—Designers saw red most of all when selecting color. Red in all its shades is the season's most predominant theme. Green comes next, from deep bottle green that is almost black, to spring-bud green. Brown also figures. Most often it's teamed with black, bronze or yellow.

Working Girls Adopt Uniform

It started when the girls at the Royal Bank of Canada decided they'd all wear royal blue blazers, in the same shade as the bank's adopted color, white blouses and gray skirts.

The idea soon spread to the men. Now 30 salesmen at a reality firm are sporting gray trousers and navy blue blazers with crests.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Shelby Perry. The refreshment table was centered with a tiered wedding cake, decorated with pink roses. Hoods Are Prominent For Fall

. . .the rage for vests, sometimes as the only blouse with a suit, often as a contrast-colored extra piece over the blouse.

. . .the importance of hats to the fall costumes, often in fabric to match suits, also in leather, fur and velvet to contrast.

. . .news in stockings, with textured lisles to be worn with boots, tinted sheers to be worn with dresses, seams coming back.

Sports Look Focuses On Gloves, Bags

The fall collections indicate a strong trend toward a fashion known as "sportive." It's not sportswear, but it's sportswear-inspired. Tweeds, fur and leather are the favored fabrics.

As designers showed their versions of the sportive, the gloves and handbags they used to accessorize costumes fairly leaped to the eye. The sportive is a fashion which calls for the best in these accessories, not just some after - thought.

Handbags, for instance, often combined fur with leather, to be worn with casual tweed suits. Reversed cowhide shag makes up tote bags. Velvets made up into sportive evening costumes called for simple crushed leather purses with chain handles.

Leather gloves, rather than cloth, are practically demanded by fall clothes in tweeds, mohairs and velvets. The basic glove will be a slim pigskin slip - on in gauntlet length. New are snake-embossed leathers in shorty sports-type gloves for all those real country town suits and sweater looks. Longer leather gloves have side self - lacings for the bolder look.

Fur Look Also Seen For Tots

Children's coat designers are all excited over the way fake fur coats are being sold for fall. In all price ranges, the impersonations of leopard, calf, pony and zebra are matching or outselling standard wool coats.

Fur coats for children have long been commonplace in Europe. In countries with long, cold winters, like Belgium, mamma may be wearing a well-worn cloth coat, but junior or sis will be snug in bunny fur or civet cat.

Fur here is often too expensive to do likewise, so the fake furs have come into the picture. Before World War I, children wore a lot of fur, and now the fashion can be revived. Fur looks wonderful on children, especially the strongly marked ones like zebra.

Classic Knits Appear In Soft Lines For Fall

Knits — the happiest combination of fashion and comfort to grace any woman's wardrobe — features several new design delights for fall.

The ensemble look is important and, consequently, almost all suits are three piece. The pleated skirt is a perky addition to the new knits, and the dress and coat ensemble has renewed vitality. The dress is usually two piece, the coat an interesting three quarter length.

Knits have a softer look — still in the classic tradition but with more grace of line. One new suit development, the sleeveless jacket, exemplifies the softer look and is particularly attractive in knits because of their draping facility. The V neck cardigan is another exponent of the softened look; for a really striking effect, add a turtle neck sweater underneath. Even the neckline shaping of the open jacket is gently curved.

Texture and tweed effects rate attention too. In boucle or raised jacquard knits, they add fashion dimension to suits from sportive to more conservative and less casual styles. Fabric interest continues with the "sweater" look in which the jacket, or outer sweater, is patterned, contrasting with the solid under sweater and skirt.

Contrast in general is found in most knit suits. Usually it takes the form of a color edging the jacket. It may also be expressed in buttons or it may be the blouse which is a different color. This brings us to the fashion spectrum of fall knits. In the spotlight are loden green, grey, black and white, cranberry and pumpkin.

There is one point in construction which should be mentioned and that is the elasticized waist. It eliminates many fit problems thereby making knits possible for many more women.

MISS LORAINE EDWARDS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Edwards, 309 Stone Ave., will become the bride of John Elzie Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elzie Howard, 1109 Myres St., on August 23. The ceremony will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the home of the bridegroom's parents with Rev. Floyd Pate officiating.

Fashion Adores The Primitive

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Fashion nowadays adores the wild and primitive. If Peruvian Indian or an African chieftain wears it, it's sure to show up in copy or adaptation.

For some of us, fashions are almost too wild for comfort. A civilized city lover can have an uneasy feeling of spear carriers breathing over her shoulder, after assembling some costumes.

One begins with a skirt guaranteed to be just like those worn by Greek island women. The top is a sweater, stolen from a Portuguese lobster fisherman. For outdoors, put over this a coat of leopard skins hunted down in Africa. Finish with a bowler hat lifted from the heads of Andean Indians.

Wild fashions are a natural derivation from the interest in primitive art, not to say the wildness of modern art. Some of the modern art dress prints are wild as anything out of a jungle.

About the one exotic fashion trend which is eminently civilized is the liking for Oriental styles. Saris and cheong-sans are gentle.

Social Etiquette Class Popular At Northeast

The art of social decorum, a frequent cause of indecision among young and old alike, is providing the answers to a number of problems which face students at Northeast Louisiana State College.

Popularity of the course in Social Etiquette at Northeast is proven by the number of students enrolling. Added to the curriculum several years ago, Social Etiquette has constant appeal, both to college men and women.

The class is being taught this summer by Miss Frances Kelso, chairman of Home Economics, and has a current enrollment of 17. Because of the subject's popularity, during the regular academic year as well as the summer term, there has at times been more than one section offered.

Combining the practicality of lectures with demonstrations simplifies the answers of students questions in table etiquette, how to write an invitation, dress for various occasions or plan a party. These are among the many problems in Social Etiquette, for which the class provides an answer.

Many students make requests for certain problems to be considered in the course. This interest indicates need for such a class, the instructor explained. "Besides, we get so many suggestions for entertainments and ways to dress for different occasions," a student pointed out.

Basic social decorum and suggestions for entertaining make up the principles which the class is taught. Students learn proper methods of introductions and their acknowledgement, how and when to write and reply to invitations, both formal and informal, when to send corsages, table etiquette and correct ways of ordering meals in restaurants and hotels.

The question of dressing appropriately for various occasions is also discussed. This subject includes correct attire for sports, street wear, church, parties and weddings.

Correct table settings incorporated with ideas for table decorations for bridal parties, teas, dinners or other social functions are emphasized in the course.

How much to spend and the choice of appropriate gifts for men, women and children, on various occasions are among the suggestions offered by the instructor.

The timid person or the one who talks too much at a party may be helped by discussions on how to engage in conversation.

Social Etiquette attempts to advise, lessen problems and make life simpler for the individual who wants to learn the proper social procedure.

NON-SPORTS STYLES

Sports styles are inspiration for non-sports use. The tennis sweater, in rugged knit and hip hugging, slides over skinny pants for anywhere but the tennis court. On the other hand, the ski sweater, zipping in front and blousing at the waist, is not expected to come within skidding distance of a ski slope.

'Country Look' Satchel Is Top Handbag For Fall

NEW YORK — This fall, the well-dressed woman will heed the "call to arms" of simply styled, handsomely textured leather handbags keyed to clothes for causual living.

A fall fashion preview presented here by Leather Industries of America offered striking visual proof that the accent on handbag fashions is on the lines and the leathers. Lines are simple and easy, whether pouch or clutch . . .box bag or barrel. Leathers are beautiful in the range of textures — grained, waxy, smooth, sueded, antiqued, lustre.

Top bag for fall will be the pet of the suburban set, the "country look" leather satchel, pouch or tote. Roomy without being oversized, it is also being "taken up" by the suburbanite's big-city sister, who knows a good thing when she sees it. This casually eleagnt handbag style was shown most often in grained, brushed, antiqued, and the new waxy leathers, and usually sports brass hardware in closings, emblems or other ornamentation.

Other popular styles on exhibit included shoulder bags, barrels, crescents, envelopes and clutches. The leather box-bag, constructed with rigid sides and a lid-type top, will be back on the fashion scene in both rounded and angular shapes.

The leather color story for fall features "deep country" shades. Starring is the brown family, including antelope, bone, honey and mahogany. Also important will be deep tones such as cranberry, mustard and olive, and neutrals on the order of fog grey and taupe. The "authentic" look of waxy and antiqued leather tannages and aniline-dyed grained leathers which retain their original markings, is a natural for this casual fashion picture.

For dressy costumes, trim leather bags with a slimmer, smaller silhouette were shown, principally envelopes, clutches and flat pouches with chains. Style details are kept to a minimum. . .burnished gold closings, self-leather bow or other simple decoration.

After-dark handbag styles spotlighted glossy smooth leahers, glowing lustres and sleek suede leathers. Occasionally illuminated with a touch of jeweling, these stunning leather bags in vivd colors, pastels or inky black will add fashion excitement to the fall social scene.

Vain Men Frown On Spectacles

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite so-called feminine vanity, men are most likely to demur about putting on spectacles, for their deep-rooted ideas of virility are involved.

Men associate masculinity with the vision of a hawk, says August. A. Nelson, who has been studying the subject for some time. They could not fathom their rugged heroes, Daniel Boone or Bill Cody, in glasses. Is it any wonder that they subconsciously resent the prospect for themselves?

Women on the other hand fuss more, but fussing is a part of their ability to adjust quickly to this or any emotional problem.

This much healthier tendency to let off steam and then relent partially accounts for the fact that 57 per cent of females wear glasses contrasted to the 45 per cent among men.

Women live longer, and this justifies the statistics somewhat, but not enough since there is no physical difference in eyes of men or women.

As executive secretary of a non-profit public education organization, Better Vision Institute, Nelson is hopeful that all people will face up to the fact that once they're over 45 their sight is likely to become impaired, or curtailed.

MAKES IMPRESSION

Fortunately, a recent popularization of the egghead, stereotyped as bespectacled, has helped men to adapt, he says. Indeed, the image has been sold so successfully that frames without prescription glass are often sold to lawyers who like to punctuate their arguments by taking them on and off, or waving them around.

Minus glasses himself, hazeled-eyed, sandy-haired Nelson isn't trying to sell glasses or frames. His chief task is to prod people into looking after their eyes.

He worries about perfunctory eye examinations in public school "Twenty to 30 per cent of young school children can't see well enough to work well."

OUNCE OF PREVENTION

He frets about the poor light in which women do their household chores. "They can become irritable, hard to live with."

Most of all he broods over the sneakiness of many eye diseases. "Of the 30,000 cases of blindness every year, half are unnecessary."

The most dangerous sneak thief of all is glaucoma, "Two per cent of all people over 40 have glaucoma and don't even know it. In the early stages when it could be caught and cured, the victim isn't aware of the symptoms."

If Nelson has to scare people to jar them out of their reluctance, subconscious or conscious, to check up on their eyes, or to wear glasses once they're told to, that's all right with him. The seriousness of the matter scares him, too.

COOL IT WITH WHITE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — You can reduce the interior temperature of your house as much as 20 degrees by painting a dark roof white.

So reports the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association which reports the color has become very popular in the past few years.

MRS. CARROLL EVANS BRANTLEY

Brantley-Roberson Vows Read In Church Setting

Arrangements of all white roses, gladioli and majestic daisies and lighted white tapers against a background of greenery formed a setting in the Farmerville Church of Christ for the wedding of Miss Barbara Roberson and Carroll Evans Brantley. F. C. Bailey performed the double ring ceremony on July 12 at 7 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Earl Roberson of Monroe and Mrs. Ina Mae Roberson, Farmerville and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James Evans Brantley, of Farmerville.

Escorted to the altar by her brother, Hayward Roberson, the bride wore a chapel length gown of white silk organza over taffeta, embellished with appliques of lace and sequins. The princess bodice with long tapering sleeves featured a Sabrina neckline, etched with sequins. She wore a brief veil of French illusion attached to a crown of seed pearls and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. M. Stein Baughman Jr. served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Sharon Brantley, sister of the groom and Miss Linda Reid, cousin of the bride. They wore semi - full street length dresses of cotillion blue peau de soie with short jackets and matching slippers. Their headpieces were circular veils attached to matching roses and they carried cascades of pink carnations entwined with ivy. Miss Leah Washam, cousin of the groom, wearing a frock of cotillion blue peau de soie, matching shoes and headpiece and wristlet of pink feathered carnations, scattered white rose petals in the bride's path.

Serving as best man was Gary Lynn Hayes, cousin of the groom. Groomsmen - ushers were Gary Roberson, brother of the bride; Billy Anderson and Jimmy Norris of West Monroe, cousin of the groom. Freddy Revels, of Bastrop, cousin of the groom, served as ring bearer.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the new home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ed Rabun on Line Street in Farmerville. Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Rabun and presiding at the bride's book was Miss Mary Malone.

The bride's table was overlaid with a white linen cloth. Slender white tapers rose from the central decor of coral carnations, white pompons and greenery in a gold and crystal epergne. At one end the crystal bowl of yellow punch was presided over by Miss Barbara Malone, while opposite Mrs. Terry Futch, served the tiered wedding cake, which was encircled with lily of the valley.

Assisting in the courtesies were Mrs. Jim Toler, Mrs. Chester Reid, Miss Judy Neal and Miss Judy Tucker. All wore coral carnation corsages.

For the occasion Mrs. Roberson was wearing a skyblue lace sheath with matching pillbox hat and white accessories. Mrs. Brantley, mother of the bridegroom, wore a two piece silk lace gown of champagne with accessories to match. Both wore corsages of flesh tone cymbidium orchids.

LUSTER FOR FRAMES

Fall Cottons Sport Many Looks

"LAYERED" LOOK

The "layered" look is one of the most important with jumpers, vests, slim knit dresses, long-sleeved shirts and skirts designed to go with each other and over each other. This look affords limitless variety for campus and career wardrobes.

A ribbed, wide wale corduroy jumper in Sandringham blue is worn with a multicolor striped, turtle neck cotton knit dress for the "layered" look.

In another "layered" design a bateau-necked shift dress in brick red cotton suede is worn over a long - sleeved calico blouse. For the third dimension a suede jacket is added.

Another "scrambled" campus outfit combines jacket, vest, blouse and pants in a medley of colorful textured cottons. A brick red - Chanel type corduroy vest worn over a printed broadcloth ascot blouse and biscuit colored corduroy pants.

JUMPER LOOK

The jumper look has many variations. Street - length jumpers for office and classroom favor bateau or V-necklines, slim or slightly flared shapes, dropped shoulders and lowered waistlines, accented with belts, or no waistlines at all.

A new slim corduroy jumper, tied with a spaghetti self-belt or not, features the dropped shoulder originated by St. Laurent. Buttons down the back and a jewel neckline are 1963 detailings.

Long jumpers for evening are softly feminine with low necklines and natural or Empire waistlines.

"SUITED" LOOK

The "suited" look favors Eastern or safari type styling. A wide wale curry colored corduroy suit has characteristic black frog closings and a black velveteen mandarin collar. The safari influence is seen in many - pocketed and belted suit jackets. A teal blue cotton velveteen evening suit is styled in this manner. The jacket has long, cuffed sleeves, buckled belt held in place with loops and big pockets stitched in white.

COLOR WISE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Greens and blues are important summer and fall drapery colors, according to a survey of the decorative fabrics markets by Home Furnishings Daily. Rust and orange are next in popularity.

MRS. MORRIS RUSSELL KING

Miss Carolyn Anne McCleary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen L. McCleary, 1810 Park Avenue, became the bride of Morris Russell King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin King, 2516 North 8th, West Monroe, on Saturday night, July 19. The double ring ceremony was performed in the home of the officiating minister, John W. Huckabay in Tallulah.

For her wedding the bride wore a white silk dinner dress with white pillbox and white accessories.

After a wedding trip to the Gulf Coast the couple is at home at 1002 Park Avenue, Apt. 3-A. Dondee Drive Neighbors Feted At Hawaiian Luau Neighbors on Dondee Drive in West Monroe, donned muu muus, Bermuda shorts, Hawaiian shirts and leis for an Hawaiian luau Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Booker.

Guests were greeted by the Bookers and ushered into an area which was decorated to resemble a bamboo hut. Bamboo, colorful ferns and large sunbursts adorned the walls. Fruit punch was served from a table covered with fish net and decorated with shells. On a side table was a hibachi laden with Polynesian food.

Later guests adjourned to the patio which was decorated with palm trees, torch lights and South Pacific posters. Guests were seated on patio pillows around a long low table, appropriately decorated with fish net, shells, candles, orchids and watermelon boats filled with fresh fruit.

Hawaiian music provided background atmosphere throughout the informal evening, concluded with dessert and coffee on the patio.

Attending the event were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Logan, Don Logan, Lou Ann Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Durbin, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Crew, Debbie Crew, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wunsch, Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Stone, Penny Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Judson Moore, Jud Moore, Kathleen Moore, Calvin Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gorman, Charles Gorman, Ann Louise Gorman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Camp and the Bookers.

CLEVER HOLDERS

Do you ever need extra candle holders for an emergency? If so, use bars of soap — after cutting a hole in each with an apple corer. For an added decorative touch, you can dip the soap into gilt or aluminum paint.

Mixed Styles Newest Trend In Home Decor

'Mix' instead of 'match' is the newest trend in home furnishings styles, and it's fun to try. If you have a small entrance foyer, for example, that you've been wanting to "do something" about, you might experiment with this budget idea. Combine contemporary with a touch of Mediterranean. Start with a low hall table that features simple contemporary lines. Surface it in a rich tone of plastic laminate, such as charcoal or teak.

If you specify gloss finish for the laminate, it will subtly reflect the contours of your table accessories — perhaps a lovely Grecian urn or a Venetian glass vase. Add to the urn or vase a vibrant floral arrangement whose colors can be repeated excitingly in a bright accent rug of red or gold for the entrance floor. For extra elegance, choose a rug with a double layer of white fringe.

Crossett Couple Makes Final Wedding Plans

Plans have been completed by Miss Margaret Ann McGoogan and her fiance, William Bryan Runyan Jr., of Crossett, for their wedding which has been announced for August 18.

The Rev. John B. Hefley of Little Rock, will perform the ceremony at 4 p.m. in the First Methodist Church of Crossett.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father, John Colquitt McGoogan. Mrs. Linda Posey Fox of Conway, has been chosen to serve as matron of honor and bridesmaids will be Miss Loretta Graves, Murfreesboro; Miss Charlotte Runyan, sister of the future bridegroom, and Miss Brenda Young of Magnolia.

J. Ben Anders of Newport News, Virginia, will attend the bridegroom as best man. Ushers will be Jack Reynolds, John Ed McGoogan, brother of the bride-elect; Darrell Binns and Thomas Edward Bridges of Topeka, Kans., cousin of the prospective groom.

Kathy and David Chanslor of East St. Louis, Illinois, will be candelighters. Mrs. W. B. Anderson will be organist and Mrs. Louis C. Ciarletta, vocalist.

Clocks Return To Glamorize Fall Hosiery

Hosiery, usually thought of as a mere necessity, is bursting out with creative ideas for fall. The return of seams is only the beginning, with clocks and embroideries of every description glamorizing legs.

Sportive clothes have brought out leg warmers, textured high socks to go over stockings. Textured tights are practically standard, and ribbed lisle bids fair to be a hit.

Meshes, often called nonruns, will take on new life because they're both sheer and have the textured look. Pantie stockings, with a girdle-like fit, will do more than tights for many figures.

Long Skirts Can Convert

If designers have their way, no woman will dare venture out for evening this fall in anything but a long skirt. The legion of business girls who have been doing so nicely with their convertible jacket costumes, will be in a fix.

When all around at dinner or theatre are wearing long dresses, the short-skirted girl will feel like a beatnik at Buckingham Palace. What does she do—take the evening outfit to the office and make a quick change in the powder room?

Lots of sportswear designers may ride a tide of increased business. The obvious solution to the working girl's problem is the separates outfit. A formal blouse worn under the suit jacket for day, can be paired with the long skirt brought with her in the morning. Blouse people are happily bringing out ruffled blouses for just such contingencies.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Store-Bought Curves Go Back In History

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: May I have the last word in regard to the unfortunate girl who complained because she had a shape like an ironing board?

You told her to go to the lingerie store and buy what she needed. I thought your advice was top-notch but one reader wrote to say store-bought curves are dishonest and that such fakery is symbolic of the decay of American integrity.

May I tell you what happened when I was a ninth grade student, back in 1908? In those days the teachers wore white shirt - waists and form - fitting, ankle-length skirts. Our history teacher, Miss Smith, was tall and slender with no hips at all, poor thing. Her long, straight skirts made her look seven feet tall.

One day she appeared in class with a beautiful figure. I was dying of curiosity — and being ten years old I hadn't yet learned it was impolite to ask personal questions. So I asked. This is what she said, "I made myself some hip-pads which I tie around my waist. What God has forgotten I made up with cotton."

So, you see, there's nothing new about it. — Sea Willow

Dear Willow: Thanks for the fascinating piece of history, and for a mighty catchy little couplet.

Dear Ann Landers: We are in our early 50's and this is the second marriage for us both. I've always held a responsible job and managed my money affairs well. When Leonard was widowed ten years ago he turned over his financial matters to his eldest daughter. His wife had always managed the money so his eldest daughter took over where her mother had left off. Leonard handed over his pay check to her and she paid all the bills and gave him an allowance.

We've been married four months and Leonard's daughter is still paying his bills and giving him an allowance.

I am very uncomfortable about this but don't know what to do. We are getting along fine and I don't want to rock the boat. Still this is like a bone in my throat.

Should I say nothing and hope in time he will offer to let me handle the family finances — or what? — Number Two

Dear Two: Don't stand on one foot while you're waiting, Lady. It may be a very long wait — like maybe forever.

When Leonard had no wife, it was all right for his daughter to pinch hit, but now that he has a wife, the pinch hitter should be benched.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this for all girls who are going steady and are afraid to break up.

I went steady with Bart for a year. He was selfish and inconsiderate and I was miserable most of the time but I thought that was the way love was supposed to be. One day I realized we were fighting all the time so I told him we'd better call it quits. He agreed but asked if we could date once in a while.

Three weeks went by and he didn't call. I was heartbroken. I regretted the break - up and came close to calling him and admitting it. But somehow I controlled myself.

Then I met Earle. After one date I knew what it was like to be treated like a lady. Earle was everything that Bart wasn't. Last night we ran into Bart at a party and for the first time I saw how crude, arrogant and phony he is. Now I could kick myself for being so dumb and wasting a whole year on him. Please pass the word. — Happier Now

Dear Happier: Hooray for you. You were like that worm in the horseradish who thought it was the sweetest place in the world because it was the only place he'd ever been. (P.S. Students, take note.)

Planning a wedding? Leave nothing to chance. ANN LANDERS' newest booklet, "The Bride's Guide," has all the answers (from announcing the engagement to "who pays for what"). To receive your copy, write to Ann Landers, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope and 35c in coin.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Fall Silhouettes Easy, Accommodate All Figures

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

NEW YORK — Three strong collections shown for fall made the point that true fashion, like all true art, means the ability to register a personal signature within the general framework of a period.

While Christian Dior-New York, Pauline Trifere and Luis Estevez all subscribe to the general dictum that silhouettes are easy and clothes should have a comfortable look on a woman, they all put individual stamps upon their treatments.

The Dior collection has an indefinable Paris air like no other collection. Gaston Berthelot, Dior-New York's new designer, is fresh from more than a decade with Dior-Paris, and he isn't afraid to do an occasional shocker to make a real point.

His suit jackets are generally long and double - breasted, sometimes sashed, sometimes gently fitted. Coats are new with swagger, collared, stoled and cape-topped. There is a marvelous capelet called a pouf, all in the loopiest mohair ever, and having a nose - high collar. It was lovely in lilac over a lilac shadow check suit with a cutaway jacket.

Dior shift dresses have new interest in detailing, using some of the bias cuts and draping which made the Thirties clothes so lovely. There is a new coat sleeve which is shirred at the back into a very deep and tight cuff.

Many suit skirts are actually divided. Most sensational suit was called Ten Below, had pantaloons instead of a skirt, a ship length shirt - sleeve jacket with high horseshoe collar of fisher. The tweed fabric was crocheted! This is a collection in which one doesn't have to wait for the evening gowns to be kept awake. In fact, evening clothes seemed like part of the picture, not a big effort.

Pauline Trigere shows a clean-lined collection with three well-cut shapes of her own. One is the bust, with a band hem which drops lower in back than in front. Her dresses use darts to shape the midriffs, in vertical or slanted rows. Coats have dash in the full swing of the bodies, the large and bold collars.

This is another collection where fabric doesn't have to carry all the news, but there are a few fabric ideas, too, such as a tweed theater coat sparkling all over evening costume combining white satin and black mink.

New for evening is a sleeved dress with shoulder folds to widen the line, another with a back gathered on the neckline and all in one with puffed - top sleeves ending in tightness from elbow to wrist.

Luis Estevez stuck out his well-cut chin at his New York opening by announcing, "I'm not surrendering to the sportive," and he is certainly sticking with his own brand of elegance. Long and fitted jackets, colorful costumes, many with reversible coats, and fitted shift dresses with draping or panels to break up the monotony of the line, were the backbone of the Estevez personality.

One sheath was spiral cut from hem to shoulder. Brown velvet and white tweed combined in a tunic costume with tunic overblouse. A three - quarter tweed coat in black, white and red surprisingly revealed a red velvet shift dress.

Estevez is doing fur designs for Coopchik - Forrest, a n a t u r a l, since his collections have always used fur extensively. He ruffles mink, makes a full - length cardigan coat of white mink with silver-beaded band edges and push-up sleeves cuffed in the beading.

Notable in all three collections were the subtle variations which could accommodate more than one kind of figure. Where so many designers are doing the kind of Empire fitted shift which can be worn only by the stick figures, these designers each evolve variations a la figure that make clothes wearable and high fashion at the same time.

Carpet Or Rug Is Matter Of Personal Preference

By BETTY PEPIS

Q: Please settle a dispute. The walls in the living room of our old house are white with a pickle pine woodwork. In the dining room I have a Sarouk rug but need a rug for the living room. Would it be better taste to get another Sarouk or have the two rooms carpeted?

A: A Sarouk would be colorful with the white walls in your living room. I think your decision more a question of personal preference than taste. However, the majority of homes today decorated in a contemporary fashion, plain color carpet in light or medium tone is favored because this gives more feeling of space.

Q: We are moving into our first house and want everything as nice as possible. We have little furniture but what we have is good. The living room will be Early American. A wing chair back sofa is brown with black, a chair is in a brown and white print. I know for walls, rug, a chair and accessories I should incorporate two other colors. What do you think of white cafe curtains and what other color would you use?

A: White walls and white cafe curtains would go well with brown. The rug might be a white Moroccan type with brown motifs or be a plain soft brown. Introduce warm yellow for the second chair and yellow and white in accessories with perhaps a touch of Siamese pink.

Q: Please help me with a color scheme for my bedroom. It now has medium green walls and a lighter green rug. A chair is pink and furniture is mahogany. One set of bedspreads is white, the other pink. I must use these until sometime in the future. A second chair needs reupholstering. Please advise color for walls, curtains, lamps, chair and bedspreads in future.

A: Have crystal pink walls, woodwork and ceiling. Draperies might be in a pale pink ground with print in white and spring green, slip cover chair in this or in a solid spring leaf green. Keep rug and bedspreads (have print for the dust ruffle) and be sure the pink in prints blends with pink of spreads.

Q: Walls in my living room are beige, a Chesterfield is brown and the draperies are beige with some turquoise green. I would like to know if I can have either a green or turquoise carpet.

A: Of either color, green I think is best for a carpet. Have a chair in green as well. It is when a room is very small that carpet and walls in the same color help to make it look larger.

Dinettes Show Trend Toward More Formality

Table tops of high pressure laminates duplicated the color and patterns of fine woods and marbles. Metal has been fashioned into graceful shapes, even into fluted classic lines.

The formal trend was explained by Henry O. Radloff, head of marketing activities for B. Broady Seating Co. here.

The kitchen has become the most expensive room in the average American home, he said. It represents a cost of more than $2,500 for refrigerator, range, delux sink, disposer, cabinets and counters.

"It just doesn't look right from a decorative standpoint when the homemaker puts a dining set that costs $50 to $60 in such a setting.

"In homes with separate dining rooms, kitchen dining furniture may be even more important because most families eat the majority of their meals in the kitchen."

Another reason for high-styled kitchen furniture is the restricted space of many new homes and apartments and the emergence of living-dining area combinations.

"Homes lacking dining rooms require furniture that does the job of the kitchen and dining room," Radloff said, adding:

"And from the standpoint of teaching young children proper table m a n n e r s, you can't expect them to learn if the setting isn't right. Certainly, sitting on a bar stool at a kitchen snack bar isn't the best kind of training environment."

Radloff admists that dinettes in new styles and finishes can cost as much as a dining room table.

"You can see the trend yourself in your local furniture or department store," he said.

"You'll find the starter sets in chrome, bronze, or black finishes for less than $75. But you'll also find dining sets at $249 and even higher.

Why Grow Old

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

It won't be long now before winter clothes come out of mothballs, children go back to school and a woman's mind turns to figure - molding after a relaxed summer. How rapidly the summer is passing!

There is just enough time now to lose 15 to 20 pounds before wearing fall clothes. This week I am printing some of the letters which have come t o me from women who joined my Eight Week Beauty Improvement Plan last January.

The following letter is one of them. I am sure it will amuse you as it did me. Most women have had the experience of not being able to buy a dress they want because of some degree of overweight. Many salesladies are not so honest as the one described here.

"Dear Mrs. Lowman:

"Some time ago when I was planning the wardrobe for a trip on which I would see friends and relatives I had not seen for 30 years, I took a good look at myself in the three way mirror at my favorite shop. It was not a reassuring sight. I bulged! I couldn't even get into a dress I especially wanted. The buyer said rather sarcastically, 'You would have to lose 20 pounds to get into that.'

"That did it! I came home and sent for your Eight Week Beauty Improvement Plan. Five weeks later and ten pounds lighter I bought the dress. After another five pounds it really looked well on me. I went on my trip feeling confident that I looked my best and had a rejuvenating time.

It's not a bad idea at all to buy a dress or so which is too tight and then get into it. Once you begin buying larger sizes or letting out seams it is apt to be the beginning of the end.

If you would like to recondition for fall by losing 15 to 20 pounds or improve your figure and general appearance, you may want my Eight Week Beauty Improvement Plan which gives you the directions you will need. You will also enjoy charting your weight loss on my lot of fun BIP weight chart. If you would like to have these, send 25 cents and your printed name and address to Josephine Lowman in care of Monroe Morning World

American Wool Makers Must Outguess Paris

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Applaud the fashion sense of the American woolens manufacturer. A full year before fashion takes its direction from a Paris season, he must outguess the couture, put into production colors and textures which will be in line with trends.

How well he does it was illustrated by this spring's crop of new lightweight wools. The manufacturer gambled (there is no other word for it) on white, pinks and blues. These turned out to be what Paris collections emphasized and what buyers liked.

In textures, the American wools moved into thin plains, frosty basket weaves, chiffon crepes and lacy open weaves. Result has been a new lease on life for summer coats and suits.

Besides outguessing Paris, the American mills experimented with ideas that Europe hasn't touched, notably foam laminated wools, which should see a big fall upswing.

They are also doing for fall thicker yarn suit weaves which look satisfyingly bulky, are as light as the souffle-look wools. In colors, watch the new beiges, which were sleepers for spring, should come up strong for fall.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Bernice Club Stages Show

BY MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Bernice Garden Club members, with their president, Mrs. Minnie Baldwin, presented the weekly T. V. and Fifth District Garden Center Program last week. Five lovely and colorful designs were on display at the Fifth District Garden Center after the show. A picture of these designs is featured in today's paper.

Mrs. W. C. Reeves made the first design, featuring red barberry for the graceful asymetrical line in a tall silver vase on a small footed teakwood base. Orchid mums with buds, filled in the overall line. For focal interest one large orchid dahlia was used in the central part of the design. The copper plant leaves were used around this dahlia for filler and background. The colors blended so beautifully making this an outstanding design, one that would be lovely for the entrance hall table beside the long mirror or narrow picture.

CRESCENT DESIGN

Mrs. Morrelle Hollis was inspired to make the crescent design using Scotch broom for the line in the crescent shaped bowl placed on a small footed base (black). Yellow lupines were placed within the line — with a central grouping of small yellow mums forming the focal area. This design was finished on each side identically making it freeform, very suitable for the low coffee table or before a mirror.

Mrs. L. M. Roberson used unusual materials, a very colorful combination of straw flowers, cut - and - comes, elaeagnus foliage, and colorful red, yellow and orange peppers forming a massed Hogarth design in a black compote container. The line material for this design was equisedium (Horsetail rush).

Mrs. W. R. Lynn used a lovely brown wooden vase (made by her husband) for her container for the asymmetrical design made by placing catalpa beans in first for the main line material. Barberry foliage was used next as a filler. The main flowers used within this line were the golden cut - and - comes. For filler around these flowers she used the tiny gold summer mums. The color scheme was perfect with the wooden container.

GREEN BARBERRY

Mrs. Clyde C. Colvin used the green barberry for the slight Hogarth design in a tall black pillar vase. This was placed to one side of a black base, thus creating good balance by placement. Yellow mums (decorative type) with buds filled in this line. One large yellow Fugi mum was placed in the focal area. A filler of photina leaves around the Fugi mum added accent and background to this area. To the back of the design one aspidestra leaf was placed to give depth and background to the frail line material.

This was a colorful flower arrangement show, with designs well executed. The Bernice Garden Club members who made these designs have received many compliments from those coming into the Garden Center to view them up close. Also, many have told me that the T. V. show was unusually good and quite entertaining as well as educational to those desiring the knowledge of the art of flower arranging. So, congratulations Bernice Garden Club, and thanks for your program.

This week the program will be brought by the Terra Firma Garden Club of West Monroe. The president of this club is Mrs. A. T. Harellson.

Don't forget to pick and dry the straw flowers while they are at their peak. Mrs. M. O. Bullock who lives at 611 Downey Lane, brought me a jar full of these lovely flowers today. The colors are orange into bronze, light yellow, and pink into lavender. Mrs. M. L. Johnson who is so talented with drying flowers showed me how to wire these flowers just as soon as they are cut. Clip off the stems and push thin wire through the flower head and back through to form a double wire stem.

These are twisted together. The flowers are placed in containers to dry, or hung together in small bunches and allowed to dry in a dry, dark place. The attic is excellent. Later when you wish to use them in arrangements or corsages the wire stems may be wrapped with floral tape. These colorful flowers are lovely when used with driftwood or as filler flowers in dried arrangements. The color remains the same indefinitely, don't let them mature too long before cutting them or the petals will shed at the most unfavorable time (while in your favorite arrangement).

Garden club members throughout the state are grieved and shocked by the untimely death of our beloved immediate past president of the Louisiana Garden Club Federation, Mrs. Robert W. Smith Sr., known to all of her many friends as Joyce. She died July 24. She had served the LGCF as president 1961-1963; past president of the New Orleans Garden Society; was active in all phases of garden club work in New Orleans and wrote a garden column in a New Orleans paper; she introduced the first garden club T. V. program in New Orleans and worked with this for about five years. Funeral services were held Saturday at the Bultman Funeral Home in New Orleans. Expressions of sympathy may be sent to the family home, 4900 Venus street, New Orleans, 22.

Pinch Off The Tops Of Mums

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Pinch off the tops of your fall chrysanthemums once or twice during the summer to make them bush out, especially if they are leggy. The tops may be rooted in sand or sand and vermiculite to provide new plants.

Lower leaves of old established plants may become diseased and turn yellow before blooming time. For healthy foliage, spray with captan and malathion while the foliate is dry.

MULCH PLANTS

Your azaleas will withstand the summer heat better if you mulch them. While mulching is not a substitute for watering, the cover will help the plants retain moisture and they'll look healthier, especially if they are used as foundation plantings beneath the overhang of your house where little rain reaches.

Don't let the soil near your tomato plants become very dry. Drought followed by heavy rain frequently causes cracked fruit. Blossom end rot is worse under dry conditions. Treatment with tomato fungicide and insecticide about every 10 days will help ward off disease.

The Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, reportedly the oldest in the nation, was established in 1875, 13 years before the Hatch Act provided federal funds for support of such agencies in all states.

When the stations were established, production of one farm worker supplied six persons with agricultural products. Today the estimate is that one farm worker supports about 26 persons.

SILL RADISHES

If you have no backyard, try growing radishes on the window-sill. Sprinkle a few seeds on a potful of sterilized soil, then cover with one-quarter inch of earth and keep slightly moist until seeds sprout.

Thin to an inch apart. A potful sown weekly will give you a steady supply. They'll do the best in the sun.

The dormitories and lecture demonstration building will all be air conditioned. There will be a $1.00 registration fee.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy birthday to you, Mrs. J. B. Filhiol Sr., one of our most beloved Home Demonstration members in Ouachita Parish. Mrs. Filhiol celebrated her 86th birthday Friday. The Logtown Home Demonstration Club honored her with a birthday party in the home of Mrs. Neil McHenry.

Mrs. Filhiol helped organize one of the first home demonstration clubs in the parish back in 1914. The club was then known as the Prescilla Sewing Club. She, also, served as the second president of the State Home Demonstration Council. In 1922 Mrs. Filhiol was one of the two first citizens in the parish to be so honored in her church. In 1919 she was selected as the outstanding woman in the parish by the Farm Bureau.

After knowing her these 21 years in Agricultural Extension Service yours truly can only say she's a "Great Lady." The following words sum up the feelings of those of us who know Mrs. Filhiol: Couldn't and wouldn't forget the day when you are so special — in every way — and when it's so pleasant to wish for you a bright Happy Birthday and a wonderful year, too.

FREEZING BULLETINS

Mrs. Homemaker, we have our new freezing bulletins ready for you now so if you need one, call our office FA 3-2211. Many of you have called for information on freezing French fried potatoes and small Irish potatoes. The directions for these are included in the new bulletin.

CHOCOLATE

Do you, Mrs. Homemaker, throw out chocolate just because it turns white. If so, you are wasting your money because the food specialists with the LSU Department of Agriculture say this is simply a sign that some of the cocoa butter has separated. At 81 degrees F. the cocoa butter in the chocolate melts and comes to the surface. When the cocoa butter hardens again, the chocolate turns white. Only the appearance of the chocolate is changed for cooking purposes, it will turn brown again. To prevent chocolate from turning white, store it in a reasonably cool place under 71 degrees.

COST OF FOOD

Would you, Mrs. Homemaker, like to compare your cost of a week's food supply for your family with the U.S. average in April of this year. According to the U.S. Department of Home Economics Research, a family of two, 20-34 years of age, on a low cost food plan, spends $14; moderate plan, $19, and liberal, $21.70.

Family of four with preschool children: low cost, $21; moderate, $32.70, and liberal, $37.50. These prices were adjusted to current levels by use of the retail food prices by cities.

Construct Fireplace In Summer

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

One blistering hot summer day, a woman took to the axe and knocked out a large chunk of a living room wall. Her object: a fireplace.

"Why in the world worry about a fireplace now, and why didn't you wait until we made all the proper plans?" her husband asked, regaining his composure after a view of the rubble.

"If I had waited, I'd never get it. You've had an excuse for every season," replied his wife.

A drastic approach, though carefully thought out. But there is no doubt that summer is the ideal time to build a fireplace. Homeowners live outdoors a great deal during warm weather, and it is easier than in cool months to keep the house aired as plaster and lathe fly.

COSTLY

A fireplace isn't cheap, but it can bring great charm and happiness to the family, far more perhaps than a breakfront, sofa or credenza that might cost as much to fill the same amount of wall space. They don't pay off in quite the same way on a dreary, damp, cold winter day.

Many homeowners, equipped with books found in the public library or government pamphlets, do build their own fireplaces. There are fireplace units with built-in damper, smoke chamber and smoke shelf that form the basic mold around which you can install firebricks and what have you Some skilled masons prefer these units. Warm - air outlets and cool-air inlets in certain units may be disguised. The important point is to follow rules for safety, and to choose recommended materials.

It is safer to have a professional do the job, and often costs no more. The peace of mind in knowing that it has been done properly by an experienced person may be reassuring.

The location of a fireplace is a prime consideration and it can't be an afterthought.

In a small room, it should not be directly opposite a door. One likes a sofa or large chairs opposite a fireplace usually, not so hot as when sofas flank a fireplace in a small room. In a large room, sofas on either side of a fireplace may be placed far enough away from the hearth for comfort.

It is good to have a mantel above the fireplace, particularly in a traditional style house. The mantel need not be symmetrical. In a small room, a hand - hewn beam several feet larger than the fireplace can offer a special rustic kind of charm to give the entire room an air of individuality.

Asphalt Use Is Diversified

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Asphalt is more than just a road and driveway building material. It also has such diverse uses as garden mulch and meat preservation.

L. E. (Ed) Riffe, Tulsa oilman who heads a company which handles about $7.5 million worth of asphalt annually, says highways still provide the largest single application for asphalt.

The roofing industry is the second biggest customer, followed by the laminating business in such things as waterproofing of cartons and wall insulation and then by coating of underground pipelines and insulation for piping.

But asphalt also is used to coat fresh, frozen meat for overseas shipment, keeping it airtight against possible contamination, and for mulching truck gardens or grassy embankments to keep out weeds.

Asphalt, he says, also goes into such things as rubber and tire manufacture, making of plastics, printers ink, panits, undercoating of automobiles, electric wire coating and sound insulation.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A revolutionary change in the Polaroid camera, which first appeared 16 years ago, will be unveiled to the public Thursday with the introduction of a new Automatic 100 Land camera.

It is smaller, lighter and simpler to load—with packs instead of roll films. Its most amazing feature, however, is a transistorized electronic shutter system which eliminates all present methods of figuring exposures.

There is no change in the unique Polaroid system of instant processing: 10 seconds for black and white pictures; 50 seconds for color. However, the processing is now done outside the camera, permitting the photographer to shoot a series of pictures in rapid succession.

SCANS SCENE

With the new electronic shutter system, the Automatic 100 camera scans each scene through its tiny electric eye whenever the button is pushed for a picture: makes an instant calculation of how much light there is before the camera and snaps the shutter at whatever speed is necessary for a proper exposure. The speed might range from 1-1,000 of a second in very bright light to a duration of several seconds in dim light. The photographer will never know the precise exposure because there are no shutter speed or lens diaphragm marks on the camera.

If the resulting picture is not to the photographer's liking, he can alter the results by turning a dial to lighten or to darken the next picture.

The new camera inaugurates a major change in Polaroid film format. It now comes in film packs which are handled as a single unit. Each pack slips snugly into the rear film compartment with a trailing tab out-side. There are eight pictures in each film pack, color as well as black and white.

At present there are two types of films available in these packs: black and white (3,000 ASA) and color (75 ASA). A dial on the front of the new camera is turned to "3,000 or to "75" depending on which film is being used. There are other numbers on the dial indicating that other types of film will become available later on.

There is one other bit of information you "tell" the camera by moving a blue knob. This selects the lighting conditions under which you are shooting. You have a choice of only two positions no matter what film you use: either a lot of light (like outdoors) or less light. Actually, you are closing down the lens or open it wide.

The camera has a bellows body which is pulled out to snap into place. A viewfinder swivels into position and is held there by a magnet. It has a separate focusing window with a split-image spot. After focusing, the eye is shifted to the big viewfinder window to frame the scene.

A flashgun comes with the camera and slips on easily. But even if flash pictures are being taken, there are no other separate adjustments to make. The electronic circuit calculates and adjusts instantaneously for each picture whether direct or bounce flash, outdoor or indoor, color or black and white.

Introduction of the new camera means that the Polaroid cameras that we have known for the past 16 years will no longer be manufactured except for model 110B. However, roll films and supplies for all present cameras will still be available for years to come.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: I'm thinking about using exterior latex paint for painting the outside of my house. It's a two-story, regular wood-shingled house. I've never used exterior latex paint and hope that it will hold up. Can you tell me something about it?

ANSWER: As with regular latex paints, the exterior type is easy to apply and leaves no brush or roller marks. Also, it is easy to clean the painting equipment with water. This clean-up advantage is minimized in the case of certain latex paints which must be applied over an oil primer, since turpentine or other solvent must be used for cleaning the brush or roller used for the primer. Incidentally, some latex paints require a small amount of oil in the latex paint topcoat when applying it over old chalking house paint.

As to whether the latex paint will hold up, the manufacturers of it say that it has extraordinary durability. Our own observation is that the durability of paint, no matter what the type, depends to a large degree on the quality and the amount of time and care taken in preparing the surface.

The questions people ask are sometimes more revealing than the answers they give to questions asked of them.

Those questions also can be surprising. Example: one of the most frequent queries directed at this department concerns the whys and wherefores of changing a washer to stop a faucet leak. Another involves the ravages of humidity, which always seems to be too high or too low. Questions about painting also are high on the list of favorites.

But month after month, year after year, it's money that appears to give readers the most concern. Which is to be expected. If we all had limitless funds at our disposal, things like mortgages and the costs of remodelling and repairing would be the least of our worries— and questions about them would be unnecessary.

Three recent separate seminars on home ownership also found potential home buyers asking more questions about financing than any other phase of ownership.

Mulberries Of The Past

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Birds, chickens, small boys, and some grown people are very fond of mulberries. It is a shame that such a wise tree and one so very useful in times past should have fallen into such low estate.

In ancient times, the mulberry was called the wise tree because it withheld its leaves until it was absolutely sure that warm weather had come to stay after the cold winters. Its fruits were formerly white until the blood of Thysbe, returning to find Pyramus dead underneath the mulberry tree, turned them red.

IMPORTANCE

The mulberry tree's greatest importance and fame derives from the use of its leaves to feed silkworms. It is said that the Chinese Empress Si-ling-chi started the production of silk from the cocoons of these worms in 1200 B. C. The Chinese sold their silk for many centuries to other countries. Caravans took nearly a year to make the trip from China to Syria until the art of silk making spread to other countries.

When Roger, King of Sicily, ravaged the Peloponnesus in 1130, he compelled the Greeks to return home with him and to establish silk production on that island. From there, mulberry trees and silk worms were taken to all the warmer parts of Europe. Even King James I of England tried to establish the production of silk in England and in the American Colonies.

In our woods in the southern states, we have both the native red mulberry and the white mulberry which was imported to the colonies and then escaped to the forests. In some places, the black mulberry was also brought from Europe and has gone wild in our woods, too. Back at the beginning of this century, the Russian mulberry was brought to this country and cultivated in hog and chicken lots for its abundance of fruits.

BEAUTIFUL LEAVES

The leaves of all kinds of mulberries are beautiful in their great variation of form. Those of the white mulberry are often similar to sassafras leaves—like mittens with one or several fingers. Young trees of any of this genus grows rapidly to medium sized shade trees. They make a quick shade as temporary trees and may be left permanently where the fruits will not be a nuisance. Bird cherries and mulberries will attract the birds from the whole neighborhood to your place because they are exceedingly fond of the long dangling fruits.

The ancient mulberry trees in places of historical interest like Williamsburg, Va., are mostly paper mulberries from which the Chinese made paper instead of silk. These trees belong to another genus quite closely akin to the true mulberries.

English IRONSTONE

Adams IRONSTONE is noted for its strength, durability and whiteness. The addition of Scoria to its body and the high temperature to which it is fired gives it strength and durability over earthenware. Divers Find Unlimited Bahamas Swimming

RACING WITH A fish may be an unrewarding experience, if one is trying to catch the fish. But the swimmer will see unmatched beauty in the marine life that exists in Bahamian waters. The entire vicinity abounds in ideal underwater swimming area. (Staff Photo by Ben Bradford)

Rent Equipment

The visitor, of course, can bring his own diving equipment or he can rent equipment. There also are excursion packages available with guides.

And besides the natural wonders that await the diver in the clear Bahamian waters, there always is the chance of plucking a doubloon from the bottom or of coming across the hulk of some lost vessel.

For those who want to do their diving around Nassau, the capital of the Bahamas, there are two companies that specialize in service to divers. MM Underwater Tours Ltd. and Bahamas Water Sports.

The Underwater Tours' instructors are Doris and Gardner Young and Charles Badeau. Howard and Joan Adamson instruct for Bahamas Water Sports.

Many skindiving sites are found around New Providence Island. Some ancient cannon and the wreck of the freighter Mahoney which sank in 1917 off Cabbage Beach, Paradise Island, can be explored a few hundred yards off Nassau's shoreline.

The tail of a World War II bomber lies off Cable Beach on New Providence's North shore, and as LST is submerged off the eastern tip of Athol Island, near Nassua.

Magnificent reefs are located between Long Cay and Balmoral Island, two isles less than a half mile north of New Providence.

Green Cay

Beautiful sea fans and coral gardens may be seen around Green Cay, a half mile north of Rose Island which is just off the northern coast of New Providence. Coral formations and reef fish abound to the West of New Providence, at Goulding Cay.

The Out Island of the Bahamas, especially offer fine locations for the diver. Most hotels and clubs have equipment that can be rented.

The sprawling Grand Bahama Hotel and Country Club at West End, Grand Bahama Island, has excellent facilities, and instruction is given by representatives of Froome & Taylor Skin Diving of West Palm Beach, Fla.

At Freeport, Grand Bahama, Capt, Herb and Belle Wehrman of The Fishing Hole will take care of the needs of divers. They also give instructions in diving and arrange for half-day snorkeling trips with boat and guide for groups.

The Exuma chain of islands has perhaps the most beautiful underwater scenery and the best weather and sea conditions for diving in the Bahamas. Joe Hocher of Nassau is in charge of facilities at the Staniel Cay Yacht Club at Staniel Cay, Exuma. The equipment at Staniel Cay includes a two-man submarine and special-rate diving packages for groups of six or more.

Eleuthera's eastern coast has excellent diving waters, although they are frequently rough in winter. Because of the lack of currents along the island's western coast, the seabottom tends to be slightly silty in places with a result that the scenery is somewhat less spectacular than in other Out Island areas.

The Current Club, Eleuthera, offers masks, snorkels and fins to guests but no SCUBA equipment is available. Full day and half-day excursions are offered.

Too Rough

Abaco affords superb diving in the summer. In winter, the seas are sometimes too rough for ideal diving.

This island complex, however, has a long and interesting maritime history. The Abacos are strewn with wrecks, some dating back centuries.

A broken reef along the west coast of Abaco, stretching some 85 miles northwest from Man O' War Cay to Walker Cay, is the site of anchors, ships' iron works and cannon—every hundred yards in some places. Wrecks are particularly plentiful in the area of Double Breasted Cays and Romer Cay.

A wonderland is in store for the diver who plunges into the waters off Andros Island, the largest in the Bahamas archipelago. Running along the eastern shore of the island is the second longest barrier reef in the world. Guided tours are condutced by Dick Birch at Small Hope Bay Lodge at Fresh Creek, Andros.

At the Forty Fathoms Club and the Avis Bimini Club, Bimini, SCUBA rigs are rented, and experienced instructors and guides take groups of up to 16 persons on tours.

Newest of the resorts catering to watersports' enthusiasts is the Lloyds Game & Spearfishing Resort and Yacht Club at Spanish Wells, just north of Eleuthera. Skindiving equipment is furnished at no extra charge.

OPTIMISTIC REPORT

U.S. May Close Gap In Payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States may close its payments gap in five years, Congress was told Saturday, but nonetheless should move immediately for measures to strengthen the free world's currency reserves.

The optimistic findings and urgent recommendation came in a Brookings Institution research study, made at White House request and delivered to the Senate-House Economic Committee. The committee opens hearings on it Monday.

The report strengthens the hand of Congress members and administration officials who have been urging that the United States take the initiative n September, at the annual meetng here of the International Monetary Fund, in proposing an improved mechanism for world payments.

The treasury has resisted. Secretary Douglas Dillon has testified that it is "not possible or necessary to make changes now."

First, he indicated, the United States should correct its own balance-of-payments deficit, larger this year than last.

But Undersecretary of the Treasury Robert V. Roosa praised the Brookings study Saturday and told reporters that the question necessarily will be discussed at the fund meeting.

The treasury still sees no need for drastic action at this moment, Roosa said, and believes that concrete steps can be taken only after "long, careful, and necessarily confidential" discussions.

The Brookings study indicated that the American long-range payments position is far stronger than the current deficit—now at a rate of around $3.2 billion a year — would indicate, so that the United States would not appear to be leading from weakness if it initiates currency talks.

Rising costs in Europe are beginning to price the United States back nto world markets, the Brookings researchers found, but America's gains will be at the expense of Europe's reserves.

European countries will move quickly to defend the reserves they have built up from American losses of gold and capital, the report predicted.

"They are likely to take strong measures to cut imports, restrain demand, and restrict other foreign expenditures, such as capital outflows and foreign aid," it said.

The study was requested by President Kennedy's Council of Economic Advisers and authorized by Congress. Walter Salant, a senior Brookings economist, headed the study team assembled by the institution, a nonprofit, privately supported research organization.

Ailing Gillis Takes Campaign To Telephone

FRANKLINTON, La. (AP) — Rep. Gillis W. Long, D-La., ailing in Washington with a virus infection, campaigned from his sickbed via long distance telephone Saturday.

Rep. Long told a rally, held in the courthouse here, that "nobody has ever run the Longs and nobody will now."

Two municipal officials, Mayor Mouton Bickham of Franklinton and City Judge James N. Lee of Bunkie, endorsed Rep. Long at the rally.

Theatre Party Planned Monday

The "For Ladies Only" theatre parties, which are being sponsored by the Greater Monroe Downtown Organization, Monday will feature the color production "Love Me Or Leave Me."

The program, beginning at 9 a. m. Monday with stage activities, offers a complete listing of downtown specials, lobby interviews over radio and more than $200 in door prizes weekly.

This is the fourth in a series of eight such programs.

Premiere Held In Shreveport

The Technicolor motion picture will play for three weeks. It stars Charlton Heston, Ava Gardner and David Niven.

MORE MATINEES

CURTAIN CALL

Two chances remain to see "The Indian Captive," at Strauss Playhouse, a matinee today at 2:30 p.m. and an evening performance Monday at 7:30. Call the box office at FAirfax 3-1235 after 1 p.m for reservations or buy tickets at the door at 75 cents for children and $1 for adults.

The popularity of this advanture tale of captivity among the Indians is shown by its frequent appearance in children's theatre and its adaptation as a television show for all ages. Director George Brian has created a Louisiana setting among the Tunica tribe of frontier days.

As an added attraction, a committee headed by Barbara Easterling has arranged the lobby with Indian and pioneer decorations loaned by Ethel Boardman, Betty Boggs, Mamie Davis, Belle Oakley, Warren Klam, Jack Pankey, Jibby Fox and Dr. and Mrs. Robert Harrop. Orrie White and Newby McNeill have organized the members of the Order of the Arrow dance team to be on hand in full regalia.

REFRESHMENTS

Punch and cookies are dispensed at intermission and the audience can meet the "Indians" and other cast members after the show. If your children have not yet attended, there is still time.

Norma Brandl executed some magnificent posters for "The Indian Captive," which you may have noticed in store windows and restaurants. The names of Joyce Kellogg and Joy Marshall should be added to those who helped Barbara with the lobby. A children's play always brings out the most wonderful volunteer cooperation and we are proud of the fine support of all the news media in calling public attention to this show.

It is good to have Sue Turner back with us for the summer from Huntington, West Virginia, where she teaches retarded children. Sue worked backstage on "Pajama Game," "Detective Story," and "The Country Girl," in 1959 and has been active in Huntington Little Theatre productions of "Auntie Mame," and "Marriage-Go-Round."

Speaking of "Pajama Game," we were interested to read that Volmer Dean Boyd who alternated the male lead in our production with Slade Brown, was visiting in Monroe from his present home in Eureka, California. And speaking of Slade, the credits for the film of "Bye Bye Bridie," now playing here listed his name prominently as associate producer of the Broadway show.

BIG SUCCESS

Those who worked on our version of the musical comedy are uttering cries of distress for what Hollywood has added and subtracted, but the movie is clearly a big success with the general public.

Betty Jo Shlenker, another fine backstage worker, has gone off to New York City to seek her fame and fortune. She reports that Bob Beard did not have to go into the Army after all and sends his best to all the Monroe friends he made while choreographing "Annie Get Your Gun." Donnavae Hughes is home on leave from the Air Force and tells us she is working on "Antigone" for the theatre group at her base in Omaha.

Lydia Nichols added two new plays to the Green Room wall by taking tiles for her parts in "Night Must Fall," and "The Distaff Side," while Tommy Mulhearn became the first to subscribe for a tile for "The Desperate Hours." Oddly we have no tiles yet for "The Miracle Worker."

Olin Mathieson has very kindly furnished us with an addressograph no longer needed by them. Olin also donates the corrugated board we use so extensively in set construction and in many other ways has been a good friend of Little Theatre.

GUEST WRITER

Our warm thanks to Murray Burfford for writing the column during our stay in California. Now we know why she is summer editor of Pow-Wow at Northeast. We are back with the impression that we are more fortunate than we know in our Little Theatre. Much higher standards of production prevail at Strauss Playhouse than in either the amateur or commerrial theatres on the Monterey Peninsula.

The board of directors held a meeting at the home of president Judy Evans last Tuesday night to review plans for making the coming winter season the best ever. Our sesquicentennial, or 150th major production, will spark an observance on which we shall report in future columns.

Stamp News

To herald the founding of the University of East Africa on June 28, the governments of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika have issued two new stamps. The 30 cents and 1 shilling 30 have an identical design showing three silhouetted figures in caps and gowns together with an open book bearing the legend "University of East Africa, 28 June, 1963."

The new school will be a federal university composed of Makerere University College in Uganda, the Royal College in Kenya and the University College, Dar es Salaam, in Tanganyika.

The United States Post Office Department announced five new commemorative postage stamps to complete the remainder of the 1963 schedule. One stamp, designed by Norman Rockwell to mark the 100th anniversary of city mail delivery, will feature a humorous drawing of an 1863 letter carrier walking in the rain.

The other stamps will honor Sam Houston, hero of Texas independence; Cordell Hull, secretary of state under Franklin D. Roosevelt; and John Muir, American naturalist. Also announced was notification that a new stamp in the fine arts series will depict a John James Audubon painting of birds.

The only date and place of issue revealed was Oct. 5, at Carthage, Tenn., for the Cordell Hull stamp.

The stamps depict His Majesty Mwami Mwambutsa IV, and the map and flag of Burundi. The series was prepared by re-issuing four of the original Independence series

Mart Takes Third Loss During Week

By ED MORSE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—A cautious stock market, plagued by various economic doubts, took its third straight loss last week on the lightest trading of the year.

It was a moderate loss and the market still remained reasonably high in view of its tremendous recovery from the 1962 lows and the frequently-heard comment in Wall Street that a "correction" of that rise was necessary before a further substantial advance could be mounted.

Fear of a possible nationwide railroad strike once more dominated the stock market atmosphere early in the week. When the strike threat was temporarily averted once more, the market rallied briefly on Thursday morning but clipped away its gains before the close. The unsettled railway labor dispute was still overhanging the market.

As the week ended, stocks firmed in extremely dull trading. Oils drew consistent investment demand throughout the week and there was selective demand for other blue chips as well as some faster-moving specialties. Overall however, the market was still groping for fundamental support.

The week's volume of 16,234,431 shares compared with 17,298,140 the previous week and was the smallest since the week ended last Oct. 13 when turnover was 11,822,758 shares.

The Wall Street atmosphere was clouded by some dubious economic news. Housing starts and durable goods orders were reported lower in June. Weekly steel production fell below the two-million-ton level for the first time in 23 weeks. President Kennedy's tax bill was still having trouble in Congress. Machine tool orders in June were 8 per cent below May.

On the other hand, the cost of living in June made its biggest gain in nine months as it set a new record. June personal income was at a record. President Kennedy's proposals to tax American purchases of foreign securities were softened somewhat. Warnings of the nation's biggest corporations in general showed a marked improvement over comparable periods.

The five most active issues last week on the New York Stock Exchange were:

FOR THE THIRD straight week the Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined, closing at 264.8 from 266.7 a week earlier. The commodity index remained unchanged this week at 159.6 as compared with a week ago. Gains and losses were about evenly divided. (AP Wirephoto)

Business Briefs

NEW INSURANCE

William H. Mounger, President of the Lamar Life Insurance Company has announced the introduction of a new line of life policies. These utilize the latest statistical tables. The result is generally lower premium rates and increased benefits. The new line of policies replaces all previous plans.

Introduced in a series of seminars conducted by the Home Office personnel for the entire Lamar Life agency force, they include many new innovations. For instance, the age of the insured is considered as of his last birthday. There is no age change at mid - year as most companies have. The advantage here is that the insured pays the lower premium for his actual age rather than for his "insurance age." Women are given the benefit of lower rates than men simply because science has proven they live longer than men.

COUNCIL

J. Vernon Richardson of New Orleans has been named State Chairman of the Louisiana Health Insurance Council.

Other newly elected top officials of the Council are Charles E. Sweigart of New Orleans, Vice - Chairman; Art J. Blanchat of New Orleans, Co - Chairman of the Medical Relations Committee; M. Jim Loker of Monroe, Co-Chairman of the Medical Relations Committee; Malcolm White of New Orleans, Co-Chairman of the Hospital Relations Committee; and W. Al Smith of Shreveport, Co-Chairman of the Hospital Relations Committee.

RAPID GROWTH

Morris B. Zale, chairman of the board of the Zale Jewelry Company, told the Los Angeles Society of Security Analysts that his company anticipates as much growth in the next five years as it had during the past five-year period which has seen the Dallas - based company increase its sales 77 percent and its profits 57 per cent.

The Zale chairman traced the company's development since its founding in 1924, but laid particular emphasis on its most recent five - year period during which sales rose from $41.6 million to nearly $74 million, and net profits hit a peak in excess of $4 million.

IN MONROE AREA

Drilling Activity Continues Heavy

High winds and heavy rains experienced across the area last week apparently had little effect on drilling operations, as recent gains registered in the 15 parishes of the Monroe Oil & Gas District continued uninterrupted. Reports through the office here of District Manager Duncan S. Cook indicated a total of 11 completions recorded in five parishes, together with new activity in the form of 18 new locations found in eight parishes.

LaSalle Parish and Union Parish's Monroe Gas Field looked busiest among the finals, completing and gauging four wells each. Single completions came in Catahoula, Concordia and Rapides Parishes.

Most of the new locations, six, were found in Catahoula, with other totals including four in LaSalle, two each in Rapides and Concordia and one each in Avoyelles, Grant, Caldwell and Morehouse Parishes.

Meanwhile, from Ferriday, came word that oil activity is certain to take a spurt in the coming week to 10 days as a result of drilling permits issued through the Louisiana Department of Conservation.

The department, in its semi-weekly release, announced a total of 18 permits in the tri - parish area of Concordia, Tensas and Catahoula. Five of the permits were for wildcat ventures.

Total on the district's active rigs also was on the rise during the week. Actively drilling or testing were 20 rigs in eight parishes, including three, all drilling, in Ouachita Parish — the Calhoun, Cheniere and Cheniere Creek Fields.

Others included six in LaSalle Parish, three in Tensas, two each in Richland, Catahoula and Concordia, and one each in Franklin and Lincoln Parishes.

A recompletion also showed on Cook's report, in the Long Branch Field, Catahoula Parish. It was Humble Oil's Humble - Walker Tensas Delta No. 3, recompleted at 5810 feet in section 1-5-5E.

A total of 18 wells were plugged and abandoned during the week, though the number of inactive sites continued a fall to 81. The district's locations numbered 95.

Cook's report included these data on the week's completions and active rigs:

FDIC District Shows Stability, Examiner Says

Growing resources of federally insured banks in the Eleventh District of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation afford a key index to the stability of the four states comprising the district — Arizona, Louisiana, New Mexico and Texas.

According to Lloyd Thomas, District Supervising Examiner at Dallas, the resources of insured banks show business conditions to be generally favorable throughout the 4-state area. In Arizona, the economy is at near - boom level, and at Houston the space program is sparking an economic explosion, Thomas declared.

To handle the expanding business volume, 33 new banks opened in the past year. Twenty-nine new banks opened in Texas, a national record. Texas now has 1,030 insured banks, outnumbering every other state.

FDIC insures 1,295 banks and 518 branches in the Eleventh District. The total includes 1,030 banks and 44 banking offices in Texas; 10 banks and 202 brancehs in Arizona; 60 banks and 69 branches in New Mexico; and 195 banks and 203 branches in Louisiana. All New Mexico and Arizona banks are insured; all but one in Louisiana, and all but 17 in Texas.

PREFECT NAMED

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI Saturday named Italian-born Ildebrando Cardinal Antoniutti as prefect of the Sacred Congregation for the religious. He succeeds Valerio Cardinal Valeri, who died five days ago.

Texaco Runs Production Test Saturday

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Texaco Inc. ran production tests Saturday in Greene County at its wild cat, the Beachman Unit No. 1, sec. 33-5n-8w, to evaluate commercial worth of oil shows logged.

The venture was drilled to 8,594 feet with production casing set to 6,925 feet to test shows logged in the Eutaw zone at 6,811 feet.

Operators released little information on the well with original contract depth 12,500 feet. It was reported the well ran low on structure and operators decided against drilling the test to 12,500 feet.

Triad Oil and Gas Co. continued its potential new oil field find in Jones County. The wildcat is the Trotter-Collins Unit No. 1, sec. 14-7n-13w, about four miles southwest of Ellisville. Operators tested a zone in the Rodessa Formation at 13,548-72 feet with the well swabbing at the rate of 144 barrels of oil per day. The zone was being acidized and fractured in an effort to complete it as a flowing well. It was reported the well logged other possible producing oil sands in the Paluxy zone below 12,300 feet.

In Rankin County, California Co. drilled below 10,400 feet in its important wildcat the West No. 1, sec. 34-8n-3e, a scheduled 16,000 foot test. The well was being drilled to test the commercial worth of the Smackover lime formation. The Loring Field in Madison County was the only field in Mississippi productive from the Smackover lime. It is about 20 miles north of the California company's try.

Also in Rankin County, Love Petroleum Co. and Carleton Billups continued to test their discovery, the Rhodes No. 1, sec. 7-5n-5e. Completion is being made from a Rodessa sand at 10,245-50 feet. The well flowed at the rate of 168 barrels of oil per day and was shut in while storage tanks were erected. Operators resumed testing the wildcat for official completion. The venture is about one mile north of the Pelahatchie oil field.

Two interesting wildcat tests drilled in Madison County. American Petrofina Co. and C. A. Kinard drilled below 5,100 feet in the Yndell No. 1, sec. 26-8n-2e, about two miles southeast of Gluckstadt. The venture was scheduled to be drilled to 11,000 feet. C. A. Lee drilled below 4,800 feet in his wildcat, the Hardeman No. 2, sec. 24-9n-1w, about two miles north of the Flora Field. Contract depth is 10,300 feet.

In hte Carmichael Field of Clarke County, Berry & Thurber completed their Habert - Keeton No. 1, sec. 6-1n-17e, pumping 45 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 3,800-04 feet.

At Kelly Hill in Wilkinson County, Cities Service Oil Co. finaled its Crosby No. 1, sec. 16-4n-1w, pumping 170 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 6,711-12 feet.

In the Ireland Field, also in Wilkinson County, Cities Service completed its Crosby No 4, Sec. 5-4n-1w, pumping 165 barrels of oil daily from a sand at 6,717-19 feet.

Pastor Is Killed In Mississippi

By United Press International

Traffic accidents claimed the lives of a pastor in Mississippi and a Mississippi woman in Tennessee, a United Press International death tally showed Saturday.

The Rev. William B. Hooker, 64, pastor of the Utica Presbyterian Church, was killed early Saturday when the pickup truck he was drivin slammed into a freight train at Edwards.

Bette White Adams, 31, of Sardis, was killed near Dover, Tenn., early Saturday when her car went out of control and struck a bridge abutment.

Near Strike Gives Market The Jitters

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)--The country narrowly escaped a paralyzing railroad strike again this week.

It was the second 11th-hour reprieve in two weeks.

The close call left the stock market and many businessmen jittery.

More good economic news came when the automobile industry went over the top in production of 1963 models. It was an accomplishment interpreted as proof of the economy's strength despite some weak spots.

Impressive earnings reports for the first half of the year and the second quarter from many big corporations added to the feeling of wellbeing.

The fast-breaking developments in the railroad labor dispute were climaxed when the railroads agreed to extend their deadline 30 days from next Tuesday for putting work rules changes into effect. Five unions representing 600,000 workers were ready to strike the moment the changes became effective. The railroads are trying to eliminate what they call featherbedding — unnecessary employment in the light of modern operating conditions.

Step-by-step, here is the way things went:

—President Kennedy asked Congress to avert a strike by giving the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to deal with the dispute. This would delay a walkout at least two years.

"In the event a strike occurs," the President said, "many industries would be forced to close down almost immediately, food shortages would begin to appear in New York City and other major population centers, the national defense and security would be seriously harmed, the idling of men and machines would spread like an epidemic."

—The railroads endorsed Kennedy's program as Congress began to consider the legislation.

—The chairman of the House Commerce Committee asked the railroads to put off for 30 days the work rules changes.

The humming automobile industry, a bulwark of the economy for the last year, pushed its production of 1963 model cars to an all time high.

A record was reached when car number 7,130,001 rolled off an assembly line, topping the old record set in 1955. It was anticipated that another 210,000 cars will be turned out before 1963 model production is completed.

On a calendar basis, production for 1963 reached 4,632,361 cars against 4,169,946 a year ago. Output this week this week tapered off to an estimated 149,500 from 159,040 lastweek.

It was report card time for corporations—time to tell stockholders how sales and profits have gone so far this year. The grades in most cases were good.

Some big companies such as Ford, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Phillips Petroleum piled up record profits. Improvement over last year was particular notable in the automobile and steel industries.

For the first time in 23 weeks, steel production last week fell below 2 million tons. Output of 1,939,000 tons was 6.6 below the previous week.

Steelmakers pinned their hopes for an improvement on demand from the auotmobile industry for steel with which to build 1964 models. With car production having remained high, they felt that inventories built up as a hedge against a strike may have been brought down to normal levels.

The Commerce Department reported that the gross national product—total output of goods and services—rose to an annual rate of $579 billion in the second quarter, a gain of $7.2 billion over the first quarter.

"There is no boom. It's a solid but moderate expansion, one that won't eat into our unemployment problem until we have a tax cut."

Briefly around the business scene: Wholesale food prices climbed this week to their highest level in six months. . .Vending machnies soon will be dispensing women's hosiery in several cities . . .The cost of a New York Stock Exchange seat dropped $45,000 to $160,000. . . .Domestic truck airlines lost $12,072,000 in the first five months of this year.

IN OIL INDUSTRY

New Records Can Cause Problems

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)— Some of the records the domestic oil industry set the first half of 1963 may cause problems later in the year.

Crude production and refinery operations reached record levels but output exceeded demand.

A warning the situation may cause a bit of trouble in the months ahead was sounded this week by L. F. McCollum, board chairman of the American Petroleum Institute.

McCollum said products and crude inventories increased 32 million barrels in the April-June second quarter. Products demand the second quarter was only 2 per cent above the year earlier period compared to a 4.2 per cent gain recorded during the January-March first quarter.

"The operations of many oil companies were not adjusted for the lower growth rate and seasonal decline in demand in the second quarter," said McCollum, president of the Continental Oil Co.

McCollum said the 1963 growth in demand is expected to continue through the third quarter, but that further action will be needed if the current oversupply problem is to be overcome.

"Individual companies need to balance their production of crude oil and refined products more closely with demand than was the case in the second quarter," he said.

He warned, however, that the size of existing surplus stocks and the high crude oil production rates set for July and August will make it extremely difficult to bring the inventories back to balanced levels on the third quarter.

McCollum had warned in mid-May that inventories were beginning to climb sharply after the first quarter's healthy demand growth had eliminated about 15 million barrels of excess stocks.

"In the final analysis, the industry's financial success in 1963 in its domestic operations will continue to hinge on rational economic practices in marketing and the successful management of excess crude producing and refining capacity," he said on May 14 at Continental's annual stockholders meeting.

Daily crude production the first half of 1963 was estimated this week by the Oil and Gas Journal at a record 7,518,500 barrels, a 2.5 per cent gain over the same 1962 period.

Refinery operations were estimated at an average of 8,644,000 barrels a day, a 3 per cent increase. A new record was set in each of the first six months of the year.

The 21,137 wells completed the first half of the year represented a 5.9 per cent decrease. The average depth of the wells drilled also declined in that total footage drilled was 7.7 per cent below 1962.

Only 3,884 exploratory or wildcat wells were drilled. This was 10.5 per cent below 1962.

A January forecast by The Journal had indicated the industry would drill 45,459 wells this year. The publication cut this estimate this week to 44,735. Last year's completions totaled 46,179.

Drilling activity has declined steadily on an almost annual basis since a record 58,000 wells were completed in 1956.

Grain Futures Pushed; Mostly On Selling Side

CHICAGO (AP) — Speculators pushed both sides of the grain futures market last week but mostly on the selling side and prices were driven generally lower on the Board of Trade.

Soybeans and 1964 crop wheat closed with moderate grains, probably because of a shift in speculative positions after expiration of July contracts Monday.

The 1963 wheat months continued under pressure and losses there ranged to more than four cents a bushel, but dealers said it had shown some signs of a reversal by week's end. They noted that hedge selling had eased somewhat with harvest of the winter crop virtually completed and movement of the grain into commercial channels slowing.

As usual, the most exciting trade was in soybeans, where speculators always have had more room in price swings because of the absence of a burdensome surplus.

That market long has been influenced by weather and a steadily expanding consumption. The big factor last week was a government estimate of the remaining supply as of July 1. The estimate of 138 million bushels hit the trade Thursday with a strong bullish wallop. It drove the market up as much as eight cents or more at the opening.

However, there was a broad difference of opinion among market analysts and the peaks failed to hold for long. A few analysts were inclined to believe the supply would barely meet requirements for the remainder of the crop year. Others held to their opinion that it still would leave a comfortable carryover.

Before trading ended that day, about half the early gains had been clipped away. Friday profit cashers finished wiping them out as consideration reverted to condition of the 1963 crop and the probability that a good deal of it would be on the market by mid-September.

At the end of the week, wheat was 4½ cents a bushel lower to 3½ higher, September $1.77⅞-¼; corn ⅛ higher to ¼ lower, September $1.23⅞-24; oats 1¼-1¾ lower, September 63¾ cents; rye 1½-2⅝ lower, September $1.25; soybeans 2⅛-3½ higher, August $2.62⅞-¼.

Syncom Said Going Wrong; Will Correct

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —The National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported Saturday the Syncom 2 communications satellite was drifting in the wrong direction. Scientists planned to put it back on course by firing small jets aboard the space package.

The announcement said the satellite was slightly to the east of the point where it was inserted into orbit high above East Africa Friday. If everything had gone as planned, Syncom 2 should have moved westward about the same distance.

An eight-day westward movement would have placed the satellite over Brazil, where nitrogen jets are to be fired to stop the satellite over one point of the Equator, making Syncom 2 the world's first synchronous satellite.

An official said the eastward drift resulted because Syncom 2 went into a slightly lower orbit than intended. The firing of the jets, expected sometime this weekend, will shove the satellite higher, where it will slow down in comparison with the speed of the earth beneath it. This will put it on the westward drift course.

Radio commands from the ground will activate the jets.

There is a possibility the early eastward movement will cause a day or two delay in Syncom 2's arrival date over Brazil.

Ban Won't Alter Work At U.S. Test Laboratory

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Dr. Norris E. Bradbury, director of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, said Saturday the proposed nuclear test ban would have little effect on the laboratory's over-all program.

He said 50 per cent of the program went to weapons research and 50 per cent to other projects such as nuclear reactors, biology and medicine and other scientific programs.

At a news conference, Dr. Bradbury said only about 5 per cent of the over-all program would be affected.

"Many experiments can be carried out with underground tests," he said. "Suppose we couldn't test at all, weapons development would still not come to a close."

He added that the laboratory has also been exploring peaceful uses of atomic energy.

Domestic Raw Cotton Futures Move Narrowly

At the close of trading Friday, active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange were up 45 cents to off $1.25 from the previous week, when they had been down 85 cents to $2.55.

Participation in the market was limited as traders continued to mark time pending more definite developments in the outlook for new price support legislation. The announcement at midweek that the House Rules Committee had voted favorably on submission of the Cooley bill to the full House perhaps early in August had little or no effect.

The cotton exchange service bureau reported exports in the week ended July 23 totaled 51,000 bales against 28,000 the previous week and 98,000 a year ago.

Committee Makes Public Secret Probe

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Internal Security subcommittee made public without comment Saturday testimony taken last January in a secret inquiry into the operations of the Pacifica Foundation and its three listener-supported radio stations.

The stations are KPFA in Berkeley, Calif., KPFK in Los Angeles, and WBAI in New York City. When the hearings started, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., the subcommittee's vice chairman, said the aim was to find out whether Communists had attempted to infiltrate the radio chain.

The avowed policy of Pacifica, a nonprofit educational foundation has been to present all points of view in its public affairs broadcasts, from the extreme left to the extreme right.

"We offer a platform for every point of view, not excluding the Communist," T. K. Thomas of Oakland, Calif., the acting president of the foundation, said in his testimony on Jan. 10.

At one point Dodd asked if a person who had refused to testify under oath whether he had engaged in espionage and sabotage activities against the United States would be allowed to broadcast over Pacifica's stations.

"In the absence of any evidence that it was a fact that he had so engaged, the honest answer would have to be yes, I would allow him," Thomas replied.

Thomas testified the foundation now has a policy, although it did not always have, of identifying all its commentators "by whatever identification they supply to us."

For example, he said that Mrs. Dorothy Healey of Los Angeles, a regular broadcaster on KPFK, is publicly known as the chairman of the Southern California Communist Party and is so identified by the radio station.

Thomas was asked if he knew of any influence over either the Pacifica Foundation or any of its stations "exercised by or on behalf of the Communist Party, U.S.A."

"No, sir," he replied. "And I think that we get into a situation where our spurs are tried every day. You know, we don't have a perfect operation by any stretch of the imagination."

Although the three volumes of testimony just released were taken behind closed doors, the gist of the testimony was disclosed at the time of the hearings through statements to newsmen by the witnesses and the foundation.

While the subcommittee announced no conclusions in releasing the testimony, it authorized publication in an appendix of a statement drafted by the subcommittee staff.

This statement said recognition should be given to the distinction "between the giving of air time to an individual or organization, and the glamorization or promotion of an individual or organization through planned use of air time."

"While a station may have a clear right, in certain instances, to use its facilities for the advancement of particular causes," it said, "The station undoubtedly is responsible for the causes it so advances."

Electrical Union Offers Financial Aid To Beckwith

GREENWOOD, Miss. (UPI) — Members of a Jackson union local Saturday contributed $300 to the defense fund of Byron De La Beckwith, charged with the sniper slaying of Negro leader Medgar Evers.

Robert M. Thomas, an employe at Vickers, Inc., and vice president of Local 792 of the International Union of Electrical Workers (AFL-CIO), delivered the personal donation and said the union was "expecting repercussion from up north."

Thomas said the union had contemplated matching the $300 out of the union treasury but "tabled the motion...to get legal advice as whether we could use treasury money for this purpose."

The latest donation came several weeks after James B. Carey, union president, denounced leaders of a Memphis local which contributed $500 to a Beckwith defense fund.

Carey ordered the Memphis local to recover the money but the local president said he "didn't see any way to get the money back."

Thomas said the Jackson donation was made "because we feel substantially as do the men in Memphis."

He said there was no "racism involved" in the matter and added that the contributors felt that "the question of race is just one facet of federal encroachment on local rights."

THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Living Easy In Ranch-Style Home

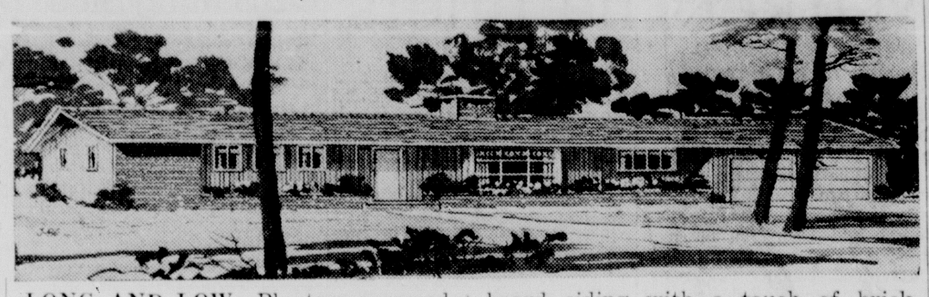
"Form follows function" is the phrase architects use in tracing the evolution of design. Today's House of the Week is a perfect example of the truth of the adage.

The main characteristic of today's brand of living is informality, and this handsome one-story house, with a 210-square-foot family room as the hub of daytime activity, follows this function well. Every other aspect of the house, including its modest size, likewise was dictated by contemporary family needs.

The house contains only 1,500 square feet of living area in over-all dimensions of 29' 8" deep by 79' 4" wide. Yet it is so well laid out it is perfectly suited for a family of four or five.

Designer of the three-bedroom home is architect Fenick A. Vogel, a man of 30 years experience in suburban home design. The house is design J-86 in the House of the Week series.

Its basic floor plan is rectangular with just enough deviation from straight lines to generate interest without adding unnecessary cost. The exterior features vertical board siding, accented by brick, with a straight and uncluttered roof line. The built-in planters in front are shaded by a deep roof overhang.



LONG AND LOW: Planters recessed below deep roof overhangs accentuate the low silhouette of this attractive three - bedroom ranch, and vertical board siding with a touch of brick give it proper balance. Main feature of the house is its well located family room.

FAMILY ROOM: Viewed from the Kitchen, the artist's sketch shows the family room with sliding glass doors leading to a rear terrace. An island counter divides the two rooms and serves as a breakfast bar.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan J-86.

The family room is accessible from all its four sides, and projects slightly to the rear where sliding glass doors separate it from the rear terrace. An island counter divides the kitchen and family room; the two rooms combined offer more than 320 square feet for daily activities.

ADDITIONAL DETAILS

While the accent is on the informal area, architect Vogel also designed the formal living and dining rooms with utmost care. A box bay window overlooking the front yard, and a grand fireplace on the opposite wall, provide excellent opportunities for interesting furniture groupings. Wrought iron dividers separate the dining room which is almost a perfect square. Folding doors, or a screen, could be put here for further privacy.

The bedroom wing offers excellent use of available space: enough hall area to prevent traffic congestion but nothing wasted.

There are a number of nice design features in the sleeping wing. First, notice the natural sound buffers between the wing and the living area, and surrounding the master bedroom. Also, the two bathrooms are back-to-back for plumbing economy.

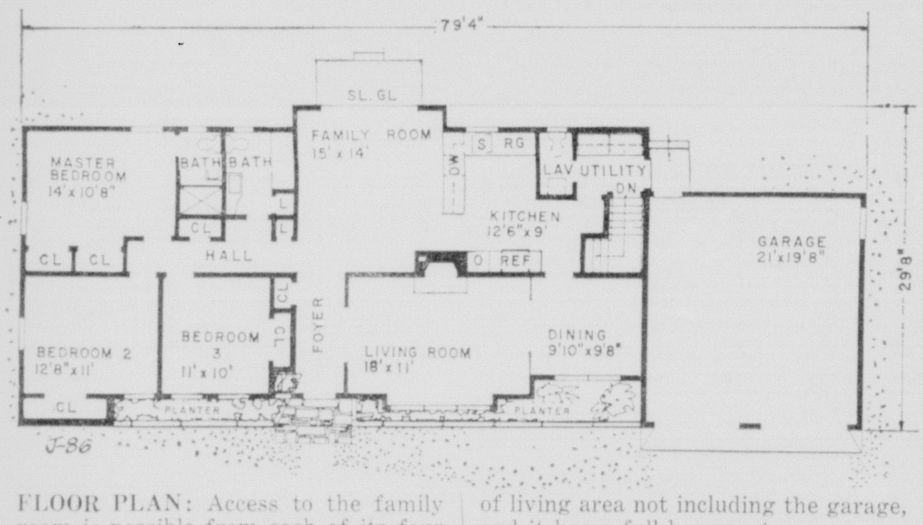
The kitchen work area is designed to save steps. Nearby is a utility room which also serves as a mud room for the service entry, and contains the basement stairs. Also there is a lavatory here, convenient not only to the kitchen and family room but also the garage and the back yard.

The house contains a full basement, which can be developed to the owners' taste for recreation and storage. The laundry also could be located in the basement if desired.

J-86 STATISTICS

A three bedroom ranch containing 2½ baths, living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, utility room, central foyer, double garage and full basement. Contains 1,500 square feet of living area not including garage, in over-all dimensions of 79'4" wide by 29'8" deep.



FLOOR PLAN: Access to the family room is possible from each of its four sides. House contains 1,500 square feet of living area not including the garage, and it has a full basement.

SCANDAL IN THE ISLES

Spicy Trial May End This Week

LONDON (AP) — The Stephen Ward vice trial simmered in recess Saturday awaiting the renewal Monday of the explosive testimony of tomcat morals reaching to the inner circles of the British government.

The defense is expected to take at least one more day to complete its case. Then the judge—Sir Archie Marshall—will sum up. A verdict is expected by the middle of the week.

For Ward, one incidental result is expected to be a big improvement in his bank balance, for paintings and sketches he has done—including some of the play girls testifying in the trial—have brought more than 3,000 pounds—$8,400—in a London gallery.

Friday night, he stepped out of the Old Bailey after spending 5½ hours in the witness box claiming his innocence on charges of procuring. If convicted he faces a maximum of 25 years in prison.

He countered everything thrown at him with the claim he was the victim of lying and malice.

Vickie Barrett, a prostitute, provided the week's main sensation with testimony that Ward took her to his flat and farmed her out for sex play, including the horsewhipping of male perverts. Vickie said the charge was $14 a time for sexual intercourse and $2.80 a stroke for the perverts. She insisted that Ward collected the fees and never paid her a penny.

"If she is telling the truth," Ward told the somber jury of 11 men and one woman, "then I am guilty. If she is not, then somebody else is."

Through the week, the brassy parade came and went. Christine Keeler testified on the opening day of the trial that she had slept with John Profumo, the disgraced ex-war minister, but not with Ward. She claimed her relationship with the 50-year-old osteopath was that of brother and sister.

Mandy Rice-Davies, an 18-year-old, testified she had affairs with numerous men—including Ward, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., and Viscount Astor. Fairbanks and Astor have denied this.

The prosecution's principal charge is that Ward installed Christine, Mandy and other girls in one of his London apartments so as to live off the earnings they obtained by prostitution.

Refugee Reports Are Basis Of Keating's Info

WATERTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., said Saturday 5 per cent of his information on Cuba comes from refugee reports.

Keating, who became a national figure last fall with his warnings of the Soviet arms buildup in Cuba, said the other 95 per cent was from government sources.

Interviewed while on a weekend tour, Keating said refugee reports that Russia still has bases in Cuba are "likely accurate." He said his sources report there are still 17,500 Russians in Cuba.

He said there is no proof that all missiles have been removed from Cuba because the nation is "dotted with caves."

Butchered Man Is Identified By Fingerprints

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The identity of the butchered man was traced today through fingerprints taken from his severed hands. Police said he was Kenneth J. Leckie, 21, of near New Orleans.

Sheriffs' Capt. Richard Morris said Leckie was slain, his body dismembered with a saw and the parts thrown from a car.

Most of the pieces were found scattered along the Mississippi River levee near suburban Harahan, in Jefferson Parish.

Morris said Leckie was killed last Sunday or Monday. "We have a pretty good idea about the motive," he said, but declined to elaborate.

Doesn't Know How He Got On The Tracks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "For the life of me, I don't know how I got on the track," Anthony Cianfrini, told police and railroad workmen after they untracked him Saturday.

Officers said Cianfrini missed a right turn, made a wrong turn and bounced his auto down a railroad freight spur serving industrial plants.

Cianfrini drove on, blowing all four tires and riding on rims as he tried to reach the main line. A switch intervened and Cianfrini jammed a rim in the switch. His motor coughed and quit.

A railroad towerman flagged a freight train due to use the spur. The railroad sent a locomotive down the spur. A chain was hooked to the car and the auto was dragged back to a street.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

I am sure you will find my suggestion most welcome to those families that have bathrooms with windows that neighbors can see through. Not finding many types of curtains suitable I went out and bought plastic lace-type doilies.

I cemented them to the window with rubber cement.

The water from the shower does not seem to affect either the cement or doilies. Our shower runs four times, since there are four in the household. We have used this method the last four months and our plastic tricky doilies are still in good condition.

F. B.

Dear F. B.

Thanks for your idea.

Personally, I think it is "fantabulous"!

And did you all know that these could also be glued on louver-type windows which are so hard to drape? Gives you privacy . . . and keeps out the hot sun!

COFFEE COOL OFF

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband thought up a solution to the problem that confronts every black-coffee drinker.

Coffee is usually too hot when made fresh and served. His suggestion is to take an extra pitcher and keep it filled with cold coffee. Now I keep a tightly covered jar of coffee in the refrigerator at all times.

When hot coffee is poured from the percolator all we have to do is take this little container of cold coffee and mix it in each cup until it is the exact temperature so

Grateful Spouse

MEDICINE LABELS

DEAR HELOISE:

When I buy a bottle of medicine, I take some clear fingernail polish and paint over the label. This prevents any liquid or moist hands from smearing the label or prescription number. After applying fingernail polish, the bottle may always be wiped off and the label remains clear.

Marie Motson

FRILL ON THE FLOSS

DEAR HELOISE:

I solved my problem of keeping my embroidery floss (especially the satin type) straight.

Take the cardboard which rick-rack comes on and cut slits in it. Wrap the floss around the cardboard, catching the ends in the slits! My sewing box looks neat now.

And, have you ever tried keeping your cigarettes in your refrigerator or freezer? My husband says it keeps them from drying out and they stay fresh this way.

WINDOWS RATTLE?

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who live in old houses, where the wind causes the windows to rattle, I have found that a wooden clothespin, broken in half and the spring removed, is excellent to use as a wedge to prevent the noisy rattling.

Hate Noises

T.V. TRACING

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a way to trace patterns, pictures etc. by using your television screen:

I use paper clips to hold the original pattern and my tracing paper together, and tape them on the television screen.

Turn the brightness up and you are ready to trace!

Using a window when it is daylight is fine, but the TV is much brighter. Also, tracing paper is not necessary when using this method. Any paper will do the trick.

Patricia Panicali

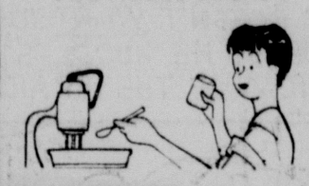
DEAR HELOISE:

Cut off the top part of a bleach jug and nail it upside down to the wall near your wrapping counter or to the end of a work bench. Place a ball of twine in it and thread through the opening. It makes an excellent twine holder.

Also hang your scissors alongside. You won't have to look for them when you prepare packages for mailing or use twine.

E. M. Carpenter

FOR ADDED DASH



DEAR HELOISE:

Does the younger generation know that by adding a teaspoon of baking powder to mashed potatoes . . . it makes them fluffy? And also by adding a dash of baking powder to pie crusts it makes it more flaky.

Millie Stickless

KNITTING LESSON

DEAR HELOISE:

I accidentally broke the end of a favorite knitting needle. I started to throw it away but decided to ask my grandson if he could do something with it.

He went to the pencil sharpener, gave it a quick turn, and lo and behold! My favorite knitting needle was good as new. Of course, sharpening must be done gently . . . and only wooden or plastic knitting needles may be sharpened in this manner.

Mrs. A. Paul

* * *

The end of the needle may also be filed with an emery board or a piece of fine sandpaper for smoothness.

THE WELL-KEPT LAWN

DEAR HELOISE:

I took a corrugated box and made the dandiest "sweep" ever. First, I cut off one end of the box and half of one side. This left me with a terrific scoop. I hold the box with my foot

By tilting the box slightly . . . the grass trimmings can be shoved to the covered end of the box and carried to the disposal spot

Mrs. Edgar Heroid

[illegible] TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

Have you ever been out driving when suddenly it starts to rain and you find the windshield is smudged and you can hardly see out of it?
